GOP Declares Socialism Is 1950 Issue

Lax Security Charged by Republicans' Declaration

'Soft Attitude' on Communism Is Hit; Secret Pacts Blamed For World's Troubles

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Republican legislators, over the objections of a "progressive" minority, yesterday joined with the Republican National Committee in roundly denouncing Administration handling of both domestic and foreign policy.

A long-aborning GOP "Statement of Principles and Objectives" charged the Fair Deal has carboncopied the Socialist governments of Europe and declared the main issue in this country today is "liberty against socialism."

In the foreign field, it demanded executive consultation with both major parties on a "united foreign policy." It blamed many of the world's present ills on "secret agreements" of the kind reached at Yalta and Potsdam.

Finally, the 2000-word "supplement" to the 1948 Republican platform accused the Administration of lax security precautions and loyalty checks.

Communists in Government

"We deplore," it said, "the dangerous degree to which Communists and their fellow travelers have been employed in important Government posts and the fact that information vital to our security has been made available to alien agents and persons of questionable loyalty.

"We denounce the soft attitude of this Administration toward Government employes and officials who hold or support Communist attitudes."

The statement pledged "immediate action" to bring about:

1. The complete overhaul of the so-called loyalty and security checks of Federal personnel.

2. The prompt elimination of all Communists, fellow travelers and Communist sympathizers from our Federal payroll.

3. Closer coordination between our intelligence agencies, with full use of the facilities of the FBI for protecting our security.

The statement, representing the pooled efforts of Capitol Hill and National Committee Republicans, was released following a day-long round of secret party conferences at the Capitol.

Debate was hottest in the Senate party huddle. There, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) and a handful of so-called GOP "Progressives," tried without success to strengthen the civil rights and social security planks, spell out the party's labor position and

3000 Reported Turned Away

12,000 'Rough It' With GOP To Set Record at $1 Supper

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The Republicans tried an experiment at roughing it last night, and hung up a record for this voteless city. Twelve thousand persons, the largest crowd ever to attend such a political rally here, turned out at Uline Arena for a $1 box supper in celebration of Lincoln Day. Three thousand, it was announced, were turned away.

They ate fried chicken with their fingers, sang, "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," booed a mention of President Truman as "Mr. Spender-in-Chief," and made Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio the lion of the evening by their cheers.

Former Representative George H. Bender of Ohio led the crowd in singing the Taft four-leaf-clover song, just as he did at the 1948 Philadelphia convention. It all sounded very much like a prelude to 1952.

The Lincoln Day Rally, a kickoff for some 2500 similar jamborees all over the country, was startlingly different from glittering GOP feasts of other years, which were held in hotel ballrooms.

It was also different from the $100-a-plate dinner the Democrats are going to put on in the National Guard Armory here on February 16.

Mrs. A. Burks Summers of this city, who conceived the idea of last night's rally, wanted the Lincoln

Craig Blasts Hoover Report Setup for VA

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

American Legion National Commander George N. Craig charged last night that the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report is trying to "destroy and dismember" the Veterans Administration while attempting to bring the veteran himself "into disrepute."

In his strongest language to date, Craig attacked the Hoover Commission's VA proposals point by point. Then he promised his audience—some 600 American Legion service officers at a Statler Hotel banquet — a first class fight. The Legionnaires today open their twenty-seventh National Rehabilitation Conference.

Craig's first criticism was that medical affairs of the VA would be placed "in the hands of a Governmental gargantua known as the United Medical Administration." Combined with VA care would be "military and naval medicine, the medicine of your Federal penitentiary, the medicine of the Merchant Marine.

He Would Stand in Line

"With this galaxy of patients, the veteran would be required to stand in line. What chance would he have?" Craig demanded.

Craig said construction of VA hospitals would become the responsibility of the Interior Department, whose history, he said sarcastically, "is replete with political government and pork-barrel raids.

"And here," he added, "there would be injected politics in hospital construction, a matter that for some time has been divorced from veterans' affairs."

As for veterans' loans:

"Why, bless you, they insist that it be placed with the Housing and Home Finance Agency, Federal housing, if you please! . . . When the GI Bill of Rights was written,

$3 Million Cut In D. C. Budget Hinted on Hill

Cuts that may total three million dollars or more have been ordered in the District budget for next year by the House District Appropriation subcommittee, members indicated yesterday.

The group, headed by Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), completed its proposals for revisions of the Commissioners' recommended 119-million-dollar budget for the fiscal year starting July 1.

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), who sat in with Bates' group, said some "judicious economy" has been applied to the Commissioners' budget plan, but he would not discuss amounts.

Proposed personnel increases—Commissioners asked some $1,700,000 for adding about 640 jobs in the municipal service—are expected to be trimmed sharply.

Search Pushed For Aides of Fuchs in U. S.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A search is under way, a congressional group disclosed yesterday, for possible accomplices in this country of Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the British scientist arrested last week on charges of disclosing highly secret atomic information to the Russians.

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee declared that American and British agents are tracking down "further ramifications" of the spy operation.

He made the statement after his committee had met for a two-hour closed session with FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. McMahon added:

"Sometimes common sense dictates that arrests should not be made immediately."

McMahon also confirmed a new piece of information on the German-born physicist who comes up for trial in London on Monday. This was that Fuchs had been interned after the outbreak of the war in a Canadian prison camp.

He was one of the scores of Germans living in Britain and interned by the British when the war was declared. Later, in 1940 or in 1941, he was released, and returned from Canada to England.

Fuchs did not obtain his British citizenship until 1942. But hitherto overlooked evidence, from McMahon's own committee, shows that he was employed on the atomic bomb project before that.

Germans' Ills Self-Caused, McCloy Says

High Commissioner Rebukes, Warns and Appeals to People to Aid Domestic Reform

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy took off his gloves yesterday in a hard-hitting speech of rebuke, warning and appeal to the German people.

He told them most of them had acquiesced in Nazi crimes and therefore must not blame their present troubles on others.

He cautioned German politicians to apply themselves to domestic reforms instead of carping on foreign issues, "however tempting."

He said the Western powers would not permit a German army or air force, or any revival of Naziism. But he again affirmed American willingness to help a peaceful, democratic Germany that makes itself a member of "a closely-knit Western European community."

Site of Byrnes 1946 Talk

All this, and much more, the High Commissioner said at the opening of the American library and cultural center in Stuttgart, the city where Secretary of State James F. Byrnes in 1946 pledged that the United States would not pull out of Germany.

McCloy spoke only three days after returning from policy consultations with President Truman, Secretary Acheson and other high officials here.

His speech was the first comprehensive statement of American policy toward Germany in four months, and the sharpest he has made since becoming High Commissioner. As if to emphasize its importance, the State Department took the unusual step of issuing the full text here.

Germans Sit Quietly

[The audience of 1400 Germans clapped lightly at spots during McCloy's address in English, then sat completely quiet when it was repeated in German, the Associated Press reported from Stuttgart.

[Stiff and silent on the stage was Reinhold Maier, minister president of the state of Wuerttemberg-Baden, whose paroles and pardons of some 10,000 convicted Nazis are under parliamentary investigation.

[Maier recently publicly criticized Maj. Gen. Charles P. Gross for intervening in this case, saying Gross "has no authority to interfere in German internal affairs in such a manner." Later, at a news conference, McCloy said he was "shocked" at Maier's statement.]

Part of McCloy's speech seemed directed at Thomas Dehler, Minister of Justice, who said on January 22 that German aggression was a myth.

"No one, least of all the people of the United States, is charging all Germans with the responsibility for Hitler's crimes," McCloy said.

"But what I do expect is an end to the arguments of those Germans who would not only deny their own guilt, but also seek to place the responsibility for that guilt exclusively upon the shortcomings of other peoples.

T-H Act Machinery Is Set in Motion To Send Miners Back To Pits in 10 Days

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday declared a national emergency and invoked the Taft-Hartley Act in a move aimed at getting John L. Lewis' miners digging coal again for at least 80 days.

The Chief Executive pulled the legal lever—obviously reluctantly—after being dared to do so by Lewis, who spurned a Truman-proposed fact-finding truce, and after being egged on by a new strike of the soft coal miners yesterday.

Mr. Truman set up a three-man board of inquiry and set in motion the legal machinery for obtaining a court order to force the miners to work in a week or 10 days.

Grave Question Raised

The drastic, rarely utilized action raised a grave question: "What will the Government do if the miners refuse to obey the court's injunction?"

High Government officials were pondering the question privately yesterday, and were hoping it would not have to be answered, despite the rebellious temper of the miners as reported from the bituminous coal fields.

There was no immediate comment forthcoming from Lewis himself. He gave no hint why he, who has been one of the most violent opponents and deprecators of the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act, virtually forced its invocation by President Truman who campaigned in 1948 on a platform pledged to repeal the law.

Mr. Truman never did like the Taft-Hartley Act, passed over his veto in 1947 by the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress, and sustained by the Democratic Eighty-first Congress despite the President's pleas for its repeal. The President has invoked the act—branded by the unions as a "slave labor law"— only seven times, twice against the United Mine Workers. He has not put the "national emergency" provisions of the act in operation since June, 1949.

Withstood Pressure

For the past seven months President Truman withstood ever-mounting pressure while the Nation's coal stocks dropped from a 75-day supply to an estimated 15-day supply today, for his ending,

U. S. Officials Optimistic

16-Day Delay in Phone Strike Sought by Mediation Service

The Federal Government yesterday asked the CIO Communications Workers of America to postpone for 16 days their Nation-wide strike, scheduled to begin Wednesday morning.

CWA President Joseph A. Beirne immediately began polling by phone the members of the union's executive board, and said he would answer the Government's request this morning.

Beirne said late last night that although he had polled the executive board membership no replies one way or another had been received. He added that if the strike does start before the results of the board poll are received action can be terminated promptly if the board favors the requested delay.

Government labor officials are optimistic that the union will reply favorably and put off the walkout to February 24.

The CWA had called a strike of 100,000 of its members for 6 a. m. Wednesday in a move to win wage increases and other benefits from the Bell Telephone System and its subsidiaries. The union had asked that 150,000 other members, not

Brink's Holdup Pistol Found in Boston Suburb

Boston, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—A pistol stolen from a Brink's, Inc., cashier during the $1,700,000 robbery at the Brink's vault here Jan. 17 has been found in the rear of a suburban Somerville grocery store and turned over to the FBI, Somerville police said tonight.

The discovery was made early yesterday by Patrolman William Hefey, checking back doors of stores on Mystic ave.

Capt. Earl W. Elliott said the weapon, taken from head cashier Thomas B. Lloyd the night nine Hallowe'en-masked men held up the armored car service, was identified through the serial number on the barrel.

Patricia Carey Is Conscious After 32 Days

After 32 days in the mists of unconsciousness, 8-year-old Patricia Anne Carey opened her eyes yesterday and smiled.

She is the daughter of James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, of 8 Hilltop rd., Silver Spring.

Patrician Anne was struck by an automobile January 5 at Sligo ave. and Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, while on her way to St. Michael's School.

She had remained in a coma since the accident.

The fogs which had closed around Patricia Anne lifted slowly yesterday, according to her physician, Dr. Vasilios S. Lambros.

She opened her eyes. For the first time since the accident, she took nourishment by mouth. She responded to commands.

"Although her eyes are open," said Dr. Lambros, "she seems to recognize people by their voices rather than by sight."

When Patricia Anne regained consciousness yesterday and tube feeding was stopped, her name was removed from the critical list at the Washington Sanitarium.

"But the child is still a long, long way from complete recovery," said Dr. Lambros.

He said Patricia Anne's right leg and arm are still paralyzed as a result of the injury to her brain.

It's still too early to tell, he said, whether the damage is permanent.

4 Bandits Grab $16,000 in Cash at Morgan College

Baltimore, Feb. 6 (AP).—Four gunmen walked into the library at Morgan State College today, scooped up $16,000 in registration fees and escaped—all in three minutes.

The bandits, all Negroes, entered the building at 5 p. m., just a few minutes after the last student had paid his mid-term fee and departed. They held 12 persons at bay with guns and scooped the money into a canvas handbag, a college official said.

Morgan is a State college for Negroes and is located in northeast Baltimore.

After zipping the bag, the three started out of the library on the run.

Police immediately broadcast a 14-State alarm for the quartet.

The victims described the gunmen as young—probably about 19 or 20.

The cashiers told police the gunmen were extremely careful to wipe off their fingerprints.

Carter said the bandits took only bills, which ranged in denomination from $1 to $100. They left behind change and checks.

Army Secretary Gray Elected President of North Carolina U.

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, chosen yesterday as president of the University of North Carolina, declares that "the real development of the South has only begun."

The 40-year-old Defense official said he probably will remain at the Pentagon for several months and will take on his new post no later than the first of September.

Shortly after his election to the university presidency, Gray told The Washington Post he considers the job a "real challenge" and made it plain he intends to play an active and progressive role in the future of his State.

"I look upon the university as an institution which particularly lends itself to promoting and widening the welfare of all the people and not any one class," he said. "It should exert a progressive and liberal influence throughout the whole community."

Gray, millionaire Winston-Salem newspaper publisher, has been Army Secretary since last June. An honor graduate of North Carolina in 1930, he practiced law before entering the Army as a private in 1942.

He rose to the rank of captain during the war and was named Assistant Army Secretary in 1947.

Son of a former president of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Gray generally is viewed as more conservative than his predecessor at Chapel Hill, Senator Frank P.

Mobster Mickey Cohen Unhurt As Dynamite Wrecks His Home

Los Angeles, Feb. 6 (AP).—Mickey Cohen escaped another assassination try today, but he admits he's scared.

"I feel very sick in the stomach," he told irate police, "and my wife is suffering extremely from the jitters."

But the little mobster said he doesn't have any idea who sneaked up in the rain to put a dynamite bomb under a dressing room window in his $100,000 home.

Cohen was called on the carpet by Deputy Police Chief Thad Brown a few hours after the explosion.

"A lot of innocent people may be killed or injured on account of you," Brown exploded. "Two children across the street were nearly killed. A piece of plate glass lodged against the throat of one of the girls. We want to know who is after you. We want to get this matter cleared up."

"I don't know," Cohen answered. "I'm as much in the dark as you are. I feel very bad about my neighbors." The section is one of homes in the $75,000-and-up class.

The blast blew a gaping hole in the corner of the house, but for the sixth time in four years, Cohen missed death or serious injury.

Awakened by his alarm system, Cohen was padding around the house in his slippers trying to find the intruder. While his two watchdogs snoozed peacefully in the rain, the explosion went off on the opposite side of the one-story home, near the bedroom where Cohen usually sleeps.

Police found him, badly shaken, standing in the wreckage and mut-

Boothe Offers Bill to Ban Virginia Travel Segregation

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6.—Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria, today introduced bills in the General Assembly to abolish racial segregation on public transportation and to establish a State race relations commission.

Challenging his colleagues to assume a "more positive and less negative" attitude on States' rights, Boothe explained his proposals in a speech before the House of Delegates.

Civil rights legislation, he said, is an affair of the States and not of the Federal Government.

"Let us show that more faith can be placed in the rock of the Legislature in Richmond than in the shifting sands of Washington," Boothe declared.

The bill to establish a race relations commission "will show determination of our Legislature to take hand in the gradual elimination of such legal inequalities as the constitution of Virginia directs us to eliminate," he said.

The bill to repeal laws requiring segregation on common carriers "is not an entering wedge," he added. "It can be a final act, if you so desire it."

For the white race, its effects would be "infinitesimally small"; for Negroes, "infinitely great," he said.

Boothe was joined in proposing the measures by several younger members of the House, including E. Griffith Dodson, jr., 35, and Julian H. Rutherford, 37, of Roanoke; George M. Cochran, 37, of Staunton, all serving their second

Disarmament Parley Is Asked by Tydings

Associated Press Photo—1942
WILLIAM D. PELLEY
. . . Granted Parole

William Dudley Pelley, 60-year-old Silver Shirt leader convicted of aiding the Nazis with his speeches and writings, was granted a parole yesterday after serving about half of a 15-year wartime sedition sentence.

Pelley, whose parole is effective February 15, was sentenced to the Terre Haute, Ind., penitentiary by a Federal District Court at Indianapolis on August 12, 1942, while the United States was at war with Germany.

He also was a defendant in the Washington mass sedition trial in 1944. In recent years, he twice has sought freedom on a writ of habeas corpus, arguing that the activities for which he was convicted were a fight against communism.

The Government's case against the Noblesville, Ind., man was based on allegedly inflammatory articles in the magazine Galilean, which Pelley published as the official voice of his organization. The magazine was barred from the mails in March, 1942.

He was accused of making false statements deliberately aimed at promoting Hitler's cause and interfering with United States military programs.

Pelley also was one of 33 persons indicted by a District of Columbia Federal grand jury on July 23, 1942, on charges of conspiring to undermine the "loyalty, morale and discipline" of the armed forces.

The case eventually was brought to trial and dragged through seven tedious months before it finally ended in December, 1944, with the death of the late Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of the Federal District Court.

Pelley Still Facing North Carolina Term

Asheville, N. C., Feb. 6 (U.P.).—William Dudley Pelley, paroled today from a wartime sedition sentence, still must serve two to three years in a North Carolina prison, Solicitor W. K. McLean said here.

Pelley was convicted in North Carolina in 1935 in a State court for offering unregistered stocks for sale and misrepresenting their value.

He received a five-year suspended sentence. In 1940, a judge ruled he had not been of good behavior, and ordered him to serve two to three years at hard labor.

Contending that international control of atomic and hydrogen bombs is bound to be "futile" and "illusory," Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), yesterday proposed, instead, World disarmament, "down to rifles."

The chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee made his appeal in a Senate speech after resubmitting a resolution that President Truman summon an international conference with the "single duty" of providing for disarmament.

He had originally offered the resolution on January 28, 1946.

His resubmission was made in the new light of the American decision to proceed with the construction of the H-bomb.

Control Would be "Truce"

Even if agreement were obtained for international control of A-bombs and H-bombs, Tydings argued, it would provide only a "truce between wars." Within an hour after war was declared, he explained, each belligerent would fall to at once to construct the horrible weapons.

The nuclear bombs are so "completely decisive" in war, he said, each nation would have to begin to build them when war broke out.

If there is a chance for control of the bombs, he asserted, then there is a chance for the control of all arms. Agreement should be sought, he said, to eliminate all national armed forces, leaving only:

1. Enough of a military force, equipped with small arms only, to maintain domestic law and order.

2. Armed forces necessary for control of occupied areas, such as Germany and Japan.

"Futile" Outlawing Attempts

"I think we must lay aside these futile attempts to outlaw these new weapons (atomic and hydrogen bombs) by dealing with them alone," the Senator said. "This problem calls for sterner stuff. It calls for imagination on a wider horizon."

He made it clear he was not asking for "disarmament by example," which, he said, was futile when it was tried after the Washington Naval Conference in 1922. Rather, he said:

"I am odvocating that all nations enter into an agreement to disarm gradually over a period of years, on a schedule agreed to, under the eyes of each other, with constant world-wide inspection to see that disarmament is progressively carried out.

He asked for "inspection before, inspection during the disarmament period, and inspection after it. I do not believe that anything else will suffice."

Not Under U. S. Auspices

Tydings rejected the idea of calling such a conference under the auspices of the United Nations. It operates, he said, in too many other fields, with too many other considerations. The disarmament conference he proposes would have no other issues brought before it.

"Suppose the conference failed," Tydings said. "We whould not be any worse off than we are now. We would not have lost anything.

"On the other hand, we would have made this great gain, that we have told the people of our own country and the peoples of the world that we were ready to call an end to all this waste of the national resources and the wealth of nations . . . and made our offer in complete good faith even though it were turned down.

"If we tell the American people that, we will see a new America. We will then know what the issue is, we will then know what is ahead of us. We can gear our Government to face conditions. . .

"Let our proposals for disarmament be published in such a conference. Let the opposition proposals for disarmament be published in such a conference.

"Let us assume we cannot agree. If we cannot agree we will know why we cannot agree, whether the reason is a genuine or a spurious one, whether there is any real desire for peace in the world on the part of certain people."

Budenz Says Christoffel Spoke At Communist Party Parleys

By the United Press

Former Communist Louis F. Budenz said today a strike was called at the Milwaukee Allis-Chalmers plant after Harold Christoffel promised in 1940 to do his "utmost as a Communist" to halt war production.

Budenz, now assistant professor of economics at Fordham University, offered the testimony at Christoffel's second perjury trial here. At the time, Christoffel was head of the Allis-Chalmers local of the United Auto Workers (CIO).

He is accused of lying when he told the House Labor Committee he never was a Communist. He was convicted on the charge once but the Supreme Court set aside the verdict because the Government had not shown a committee quorum was present.

Thirteen Congressmen—a majority—since have testified they heard him make the sworn statement in March, 1947.

Known as a Good Bolshevik

Budenz said he first met Christoffel in Chicago in the late 1930s when the Communists were trying to destroy the Socialist Party as a rival in Wisconsin. At that time, he said, the union leader was introduced to him as a "good Bolshevik."

Then, in 1940, Budenz said, Christoffel attended a Milwaukee meeting along with Eugene Dennis, then a member of the Communist Party's political bureau. Dennis now is national secretary and is one of the 11 top party leaders recently convicted of conspiracy in New York.

Budenz said that after Dennis warned there was a "great necessity" for the party to gird itself for "revolutionary acts" in view of the Soviet-German friendship pact, Christoffel said he would "do his utmost as a Communist" to force a work stoppage at Allis-Chambers.

He said a three-month work stoppage followed.

Rogge Says His Story "Grows"

Defense Attorney O. John Rogge asked Budenz if he ever had seen Christoffel's signature on a Communist Party membership card, and Budenz agreed he never had. Rogge also said Budenz had brought out "quite a few things" he hadn't mentioned at Christoffel's first trial.

"Each time you've told us your story, it's grown," he observed.

In reply to other cross-examination, Budenz said $25 a day was the highest fee he ever received for testifying on communism. He added he doesn't like such work and always tries to get out of it.

He said that in August, 1941, a Roy Hudson, whom he described as another representative of the party's political bureau, assured Christoffel the Allis-Chalmers strike was "more efficient" than another allegedly initiated by the Communists at North American Aviation Corp.

He said Christoffel replied that "weakness had developed" in the strike but that "could be cured." This meeting, he said, took place at a Buffalo, N. Y., hotel during an auto workers convention.

Budenz referred specifically to three meetings with Christoffel and others he described as Communists in 1937 and 1938. Prosecutor John S. Pratt asked if Christoffel was a Communist then. Budenz shrugged.

"He was attending the Communist meeting," he said, "and speaking as a Communist. He used the phrase 'as a Communist'."

He said the "good Bolshevik" label was tacked on Christoffel by Emil Costello, who introduced them in Chicago. He identified Costello as a trade union official of the Wisconsin Communists.

Later, Budenz said, they all went to the offices of the Chicago Communist newspaper, the Daily Record, where they met a Jack Stachel. Budenz, who edited the paper, said Stachel was "perhaps the most powerful member of the political committee of the Communist Party."

Christoffel and Stachel, he said, "greeted each other as comrades."

Debater Calls For Non-Red Oath at Polls

Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.) declared last night that a non-Communist loyalty oath should be required of American citizens as a condition to their right to vote in national elections.

The proposal was criticized as a totalitarian way to fight communism by Dr. Charles S. Collier, professor of international law at George Washington University.

Dr. Collier, debating the proposal with Representative Velde at an anti-Communist "town meeting" sponsored by the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, also objected it would be the first limitation on the right to vote based on political belief and would seemingly impinge on liberty of conscience.

Representative Velde, a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee and a former FBI agent, said the loyalty oath requirement would further the stated purpose of the Constitution to maintain a republican form of government by combatting any plans for its overthrow.

It would provide a tool for prosecution of those proved to be Communists under perjury laws, he said. It would help to get out the vote, too, according to the Representative, because loyal citizens would want to show they had signed the oaths by voting.

The debate was held at Gonzaga High School auditorium, N. Capitol and H sts. nw. Shane McCarthy is chairman of the "town hall" series and Eugene C. Braczenas was chairman of last night's meeting.

tee on April 19, 1946, a summary history of atomic developments is included. In reporting on developments in England, it mentions that sometime not long after April, 1940, Dr. Fuchs was working with others on the immensely important theoretical questions in calculations on the critical size of the atom bomb, the amount of energy likely to be released, and ways to increase it.

Leftist Leanings Confirmed

Yesterday McMahon also confirmed reports previously published that Fuchs was a Communist, or had very strong left-wing leanings, as a young man in Germany, before he left that country in 1933.

From Ottowa, it was reported that after his interment, Fuchs was cleared and placed into the "Class A" category of security.

This, apparently, was common British practice with many of the Germans who had fled the Nazi regime. Those determined as "Class B" cases were held interned throughout the war.

What has not yet been determined is whether the British knew of Fuchs' Communist leanings, or if they did, why they employed him on atomic work.

No screening was given to him when he came to this country in 1943, with a British group of atomic scientists. The practice of the Army Manhattan Engineering District, which made the atomic bomb, was to accept without question the British certification.

Much Work Done by Germans

That Fuchs, though German-born, worked on the British atomic project is in no way strange. For, as was recalled yesterday, much of the British work in this field was undertaken by German refugees.

The most important and most top-secret of the British war projects was work on radar, where screening and security was intense, and where few if any, posts were held by persons not of British birth.

Atomic work was considered less practical and urgent at the outbreak of the war. Accordingly, German refugees were shunted off in that direction.

Thus, as the British records show, the most prominent and gifted of the men who did the first hard work on the project under Thomson, Chadwick, and Oliphant, were three fugitives from Hitler, Drs. Frisch, Peierls and Simon.

Fuchs worked with Professor Peierls.

The case of Dr. Fuchs yesterday provoked a rash of demands on Capitol Hill for more atomic secrecy.

At the same time, some legislators urged that aliens be barred from American atomic projects. Fuchs had worked on the A-bomb here at the Los Alamos weapons laboratory from 1943 to 1946.

Miss Coplon Sought Secrets, Her Boss Says

New York, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Judith Coplon asked three times to see a "top secret" Justice Department document regarding Russian agents in the United States, her former boss said today.

William E. Foley, chief of the internal security section and the foreign agent' registration section of the Justice Department, testified for the prosecution at the espionage-conspiracy trial of Miss Coplon and Russian engineer Valentin Gubitchev.

Foley said that in January, 1949, he was told Miss Coplon was under suspicion and should not have access to security reports. In order not to arouse her suspicions, he said, he called a staff meeting and said that, because of a reduction in personnel, Miss Coplon would no longer classify security reports.

She Called It a Sight

He said she objected "that it was a slight on her ability and a criticism of her ability" and next day asked him if she had any future in the department.

On three separate occasions in January and February, he testified, Miss Coplon asked to see a "top secret" document regarding Russian agents in this country. He said he refused her requests. When the Government girl and Gubitchev were arrested last March 4 there was a memo in her purse saying she had been unable to see a top secret report on Communist activities.

Archibald Palmer, Miss Coplon's attorney, and Abraham Pomerantz, Gubitchev's lawyer, demanded that the court order the Government to produce the "top secret" document which Foley refused to give to Miss Coplon. Judge Sylvester Ryan ordered it brought to him to read, to see if it should be presented in this case.

Denies Taking Her to Theater

Palmer tried unsuccessfully to get that document introduced in Miss Coplon's trial at Washington, where she was found guilty of espionage and sentenced to 40 months to 10 years in jail.

Palmer tried to get Foley to testify that he and Miss Coplon were "friends" until he learned of FBI suspicions about her.

Foley denied under cross examination that he "took Judith Coplon" to see a Washington performance of Hamlet. Foley said his division had received "four courtesy tickets" to the performance which were used by a department attorney and his wife, Miss Coplon and himself.

The Government introduced as evidence today the "decoy" Government memorandum found in Miss Coplon's purse the night she was arrested.

Pomerantz Overruled

Special FBI Agent Robert J. Lamphere, who prepared the memo, said "it was to be placed in the hands of Judith Coplon to see if it would fall into Russian hands."

Pomerantz objected to introduction of the memo on the ground that it "shows no evidence of conspiracy" involving Gubitchev. Judge Ryan overruled him, but said if the Government does not prove later that the document is evidence of conspiracy, the defense may move to strike it.

Ryan granted a defense request that recordings from a microphone hidden by the FBI in Miss Coplon's private office be played to the jury.

West Germans Halt Steel to East Zone

Berlin, Feb. 6 (AP).—The West German government has decided to stop steel shipments to Eastern Germany because the East zone has failed to fulfill a trade agreement, American officials said today.

Simultaneously, the British declared the recent Russian slowdown of highway traffic to Berlin was a smoke screen to hide East Germany's economic plight.

The East-West trade agreement, signed last October, called for an exchange of $150,000,000 worth of goods between West Germany and the Soviet-occupied East Zone, including 335,000 tons of iron and steel for the Soviet Zone.

American officials said the East Zone has been importing large quantities of iron and steel from the West Zone but has sent only a trickle of agricultural products, timber, mineral oils and other goods to the West.

British headquarters asserted the Russian explanation for the truck slow-down advanced "pretexts" and skirted the facts.

The Russians abruptly called off their two-week "little blockade" at Helmstedt on the frontier Saturday. Since then they have permitted trucks to clear the checkpoint with a minimum of delay for inspection of papers.

Tonight, however, the Russians again delayed traffic at Helmstedt without explanation, slowing down the entry of Berlin-bound trucks to the point where a waiting line was established again. By midnight, with the entry rate cut to four or five trucks an hour, there was a line of 15 trucks, the first such line since Saturday afternoon.

"The only object of the repeated interferences," said the British, "has been to try to shake confidence in Western Berlin and slow its recovery. Soviet occupation and East Zone German authorities are perturbed at the contrast between living conditions in the Western sectors of Berlin and those in the Eastern Zone."

House Votes Liability Boost In GI Home Sales 'Squeeze'

By The Associated Press

The House yesterday passed a bill slapping treble damage liability on sales agents who take "on the side" payments in the sales of homes to veterans under the GI bill.

The measure, requested by the Justice Department, was approved and sent to he Senate without a dissenting vote.

In urging its adoption, the House Veterans Committee said there was an "all too prevalent practice of real estate dealers accepting payment by veterans in excess of the figures set by the Veterans' Administration appraiser."

Justice Department records show fines under existing law range from $1 to $250 although overpayments run up to $1500.

The bill provides that the veteran himself must institute action within 30 days to recover treble damages. After that, however, he may request the Attorney General to act for him, but he may recover only one-third the damages for himself.

Veterans Groups Blame VA for School Abuses

The big veterans' organizations yesterday said the Veterans' Administration is primarily responsible for such trade school abuses as exist in the GI education program.

The VA, in a report to the Senate Labor Committee, has said millions of dollars are being wasted on GI training by vocational and trade schools of questionable value.

Gen. Carl R. Gray, jr., VA administrator, said some 5600 of the 8800 approved schools below college level and operating for profit have sprung up since the GI bill went into effect in 1944.

A spokesman for the American Legion declared the VA in contracting to pay for these training services has failed to establish standards to guide State agencies in approving them for VA contracts.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars conceded that many of the profit-making private schools are below par and that many of the veterans themselves are "riding the gravy train."

But it is not the veterans' fault, a VFW spokesman declared.

"The VA entered into contracts initially that should never had been entered into," he said.

"The VA is vulnerable on this, and it should have watched more carefully. Many of the same people who ran this sort of training after World War I are running it now (in VA). They had plenty of experience, and should have been wiser about wasting years of young men's lives and millions in the taxpayers' money."

The VA report on the veterans' education and training program was submitted to Congress at the request of the Labor Committee. President Truman in his 1951 budget message also had asked General Gray to study the situation and recommend remedies.

Gray said much of the same type of training could have been provided on the job "at considerably less cost to the Government."

He suggested that Congress establish standards for regulation of private profit-making schools, in which 459,000 veterans were pursuing vocational training at the end of October, 1949.

Gray went on to assert that more than 2000 of the 5600 profit schools established since 1944 provide vocational training. The report implied that a need for them is doubtful.

In general review of the GI educational program, Gray said that 6,550,000 veterans entered training in the first five years. The cost to the Government for subsistence, tuition, books and supplies has exceeded $8,715,000,000. Some 40,800 educational institutions and 500,000 job-training establishments are on the approved list.

Jessup Warns on Indo-China

Singopare, Feb. 6 (AP).—United States Roving Ambassador Philip Jessup said today the United States would regard an armed aggression against Indonesia "as a grave matter."

He said he believed Russia and Communist China were ready to go all-out in aiding Moscow-trained Ho Chi-minh's Vietnam Republic in Indonesia with material aid and troops.

The Ambassador, making a fact-finding tour of the Far East, is to meet with United States diplomats in the area at a conference at Bangkok, Thailand, next Monday.

Russia and Communist China have given official diplomatic recognition to Ho's Vietnam Republic, which has been fighting a guerilla war against the French for more than three years. France is backing the Vietnam state headed by former Emperor Bao Dai. The United States and Britain have indicated they soon will recognize Bao Dai.

Jessup said there was "urgent" need for action to save southeast Asia from communism. What kind of action this should be is under study, he said, but "quicker action may be necessary than the Point Four program."

The Point Four program is the proposal outlined in President Truman's inaugural address a year ago for technical and financial assistance in the economic development of backward areas of the world.

Jessup said "I cannot subscribe to the defeatest attitude" of many trained observers in this area that southeast Asia might as well be written off to the Communists already.

"Stalin's program is clear, quite clear," he said. "Russia is encouraging nationalism in Asia only as a step toward the subjection of the people to the alien rule of Russian dictators."

Germans Caused Own Ills, McCloy Says in Sharp Rebuke

know that such utterances do incalculable harm and set back the cause of Germany. They call to mind what people are now disposed to forget—that is, the amazing docility and acquiescense of the greater part of the German people toward Nazi outrages.

"After all, it was these outrages which brought about the distress from which Germany now suffers, and much more besides."

"We Americans are not here exclusively to feed the German people and promote economic recovery," McCloy went on, "nor merely to see that tanks and planes are not built.

Political Recovery Main Goal

"Our main purpose is to help Germany achieve political recovery. By that I mean, to help the German people establish a political democracy in which they can live as free men and enjoy the benefits of their freedom. That is my answer to those who occasionally say that we have no right to mix into the political problems confronting this country."

McCloy then said America wanted the German people to develop democratic independence and close partnership with the rest of "free Europe"; to take an increasingly active part in European political and economic organization; and to have "the widest freedom to shape their future" without becoming a threat to other nations or world peace.

He promised that the United States would support and encourage "democratic forces" in Germany; would support the development of a federal government ultimately embracing the whole country; would foster fair trade practices, and would try to obtain the return of property stolen by the Nazis.

In an aside to the Russians, he predicted that new interference in Berlin would be no more successful than the former blockade. And in a word of conciliation to France, he said the Germans must not let the Saar issue "become again the starting poing for internal political maneuvering leading only to embittered Franco-German misunderstanding."

Urges Regenerated Spirit

He pleaded with the Germans to break with traditions that led only to "misery and disaster," and to show a regenerated spirit as members of the world community.

McCloy's speech coincided with the arrival in Washington of Dr. Franz Bluecher, western German minister for economic recovery, who has been under attack by American officials in Germany for his handling of Marshall Plan aid. Bluecher is here for discussions with State Department and ECA officials, and plans to visit Secretary Acheson today.

Legion Chief Craig Blasts Hoover Report Setup for VA

Federal Housing did its utmost to obtain jurisdiction . . . and I say that the proponents of this recommendation now are more interested in expanding and making larger Federal Housing than they are in administering to the needs of their former defenders."

Left to the VA, he said, would be "the right" to handle pensions, retirement benefits, disability compensation and guardianships.

But with various agencies handling records, the Indiana attorney continued, "by the time a poor claim would have run the gantlet and passed through the maze of bureaucratic machinery and red tape, the claimant would either have passed to his reward or given up in disgust."

"I indict," he said, "the authors and proponents of these suggested changes as men without experience in the matter of veterans' affairs. I indict them for asking the American people to not look, to not study, to not consider suggested changes relative to a sacred duty.

"The American Legion, its auxiliary, and the 18 million people for whom it may speak, indict the paid hirelings of the Citizens Committee for its attempt to flood this Nation with propaganda composed of half-truths and falsehoods . . .

"I regret to say the campaign that has been conducted by the Citizens Committee has attempted to bring into disrepute the veteran. And while it has only been a few short years since the last shots were fired . . . an attempt is being made to villify the veteran, to charge him with being a treasury raider."

Craig had no kind words for the press. He charged newspapers identify parties in civil and criminal actions as veterans, rather than in other terms.

Today the Legion conference will be devoted almost exclusively to discussions of the Hoover Report as it affects VA affairs. The meeting will last through Thursday.

Czechs' Plan To Try Aides Of Benes Told

Prague, Feb. 6 (AP).—Highly reliable sources said tonight the Czechoslovak government will try a large group of followers of the late President Eduard Benes "in a very short while."

They will be charged with plotting the overthrow of the present regime, the informants said.

The purpose of the trial, according to these sources, will be to discredit the memory of the former president, still revered here by millions of Czechs as a national hero.

Those to be tried, the informants said, are all former National Socialist members of Parliament. Benes was leader of the National Socialists Socialists until 1935 when he became president and gave up all political affiliations.

The party was crushed by the Communists after their coup in February, 1948, and finally re-emerged as the Communist-line Socialist Party.

The informants said the defendants will include Josef David, who was chairman of Parliament until the Communists took control of the legislative body, and several former women members.

The same sources said Vilem Novy, former editor-in-chief of Rude Pravo, official organ of the Czech Communist Party, also will be tried soon.

Novy was ousted from his post last year on charges of a "lack of Bolshevist vigilance." A few days before his expulsion he suddenly resigned his post in Parliament because of "ill health."

Aged Parrot's Master To Leave It $40,000

Detroit, Feb. 6 (AP).—Bob, an ancient pet parrot, won't be without his cracker after his master is gone.

George M. Blair, 63, a retired policeman, said today he has willed all his estate, valued at more than $40,000, to the bird.

"He's the only friend I have," Blair said.

He claimed the parrot is 52 years old and has been in the family for 50 years since his grandmother brought it from South America.

Bombers Hit Utility Plants At Shanghai

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 6 (AP).—Nationalist warplanes bombed Shanghai power and water plants today, scoring some direct hits.

An air force communique said it was the heaviest raid of the war on the Red-held port city.

The communique said 15 B-24s, each carrying 12 quarter-ton bombs, attacked three target areas—the Shanghai power plant, the Chapei water and power plant, and the Nangshi and Husashan power plants.

Heavy ack-ack fire was encountered but one correspondent who accompanied the raiders said it fell short. He said direct hits were scored from 9000 feet on the Chapeil plant.

Nationalist military intelligence, meanwhile, reported Russian minerologists and other technicians are directing work at the uranium mines in Kwangsi. The ore is being shipped north, the reports said.

An army communique said Nationalist guerillas were forced, under Red pressure, to withdraw from two areas they occupied in Fukien Province.

Cabinet Holes Are Plugged, Bidault Says

Paris, Feb. 6 (NYHT).—Premier Georges Bidault, who was forced to reorganize his cabinet after its Socialist members resigned Friday, announced tonight he will have a new government list ready to present to the National Assembly for its approval today.

Bidault cleared what seemed his last major hurdle when the Radical Socialist Party today approved acceptance by Henri Queuille of the post of minister of the interior. Queuille, a Radical Socialist leader, was Bidault's predecessor as premier.

The other four cabinet seats vacated by the Socialists are to go either to the Radical Socialist or to Bidault's party, Popular Republican Movement.

'Mighty Mouse' Plane Rocket Successfully Tested by Navy

The Navy yesterday revealed the development of a powerful new aircraft rocket capable of destroying any bomber with a single, direct hit.

Named the "Mighty Mouse," the projectile was officially described as "the first successful air-to-air rocket." Its development is viewed as one of the most important achievements in fighter plane armament since the war.

One of the chief advantages of the new rocket is that it can be carried in substantial quantities by jet interceptor fighters. It will be used with a new-type airplane rocket launcher—still under development—which feeds the projectiles into firing position from a magazine rather than carrying them fixed under the wing like present rockets.

Air Force officials said the "Mighty Mouse" is expected to be the primary weapon of their F-86D "Sabre" and the new F-94 interceptor fighter.

It is expected to give fighter craft an added advantage over bombers such as the B-36. The rocket must be fired straight ahead, either singly or in salvo, by aiming the plane at the target. Thus it is not adaptable for use by bombing planes.

About 3 inches in diameter and apparently about 3 feet long, the rocket was described in the Department of Defense announcement as "small enough to be carried in quantity by its mother aircraft, yet fast and powerful enough to destroy any known plane with a direct hit."

Considered "Interim" Weapon

Prior American aircraft rockets have been "air-to-ground"—the 5-inch and 11-inch "Tiny Tims" used by fighter-bombers to attack ground targets. The Germans, however, introduced an air-to-air rocket late in the war. While officials considered the development of the "Mighty Mouse" as an important step, it is viewed as an "interim" weapon for use until an air-to-air guided missile is perfected.

The Rocket operates with folding fins which reduce air resistance on the mother plane and increase the carrying capacity of the launcher.

"The folding fin principle has proved highly satisfactory in tests," the department's statement said.

"The fins, which give directional stability to the rocket after it is fired, fold together while in the launcher and immediately extend outward to their normal flight position when the rocket is fired."

Gray Elected College Head

likely to follow Graham's example of supporting out-of-State left-of-center causes, he'll be a champion of academic freedom and progressive influences within the State.

In his new post, Gray will head not only the University of North Carolina proper at Chapel Hill, but also North Carolina State College at Raleigh and the Woman's College in Greensboro.

"I feel the South is at the portal of a great period of development and will need to widen the scope of its educational system," he said. "Like the rest of the Southern States, North Carolina has been exporting too much of its brain power for too many years. Our colleges have a tremendous job to do."

Gray's name was the only one submitted to the university board of trustees yesterday and the election was unanimous. No successor has been selected for his Pentagon post.

Russians Renege On U. N. Decisions, Puerto Rico Hears

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Feb. 6 (AP). Warren R. Austin, chief United States Delegate to the United Nations, told the joint session of the Puerto Rico Legislature today Russia does not carry out U. N. decisions.

"International cooperation through the United Nations requires two steps, not just one," Austin said. "It requires, first, participation in making the decision. This the Soviet Union usually does.

"But it requires in adition that the country carry out what the U. N. decides to do. This the Soviet Union usually does not do."

He said Russia is "far more isolationist than the United States ever was. And that reason is enough to make agreement exceedingly difficult."

Austin and Mrs. Austin are on a tour of Caribbean countries. He told the Legislature he was here to make an informal report on U. N. work, on United States participation in the work, and on the prospects for peace.

12,000 'Rough It' With GOP To Set Record at $1 Supper

Day celebration to get nearer to a rail-splitter atmosphere than heretofore. Hence, the Uline sports arena, the low cost, and the near absence of mink coats and orchids.

7400 Boxes Fall Short

Admission was $1, plus a 20-cent tax. The box suppers, prepared by the Hot Shoppes Pantry Houses, cost a dollar. They contained, besides the fried chicken, potato salad, pickles and buns. Coffee was on the side.

About 7400 box suppers had been ordered, not nearly enough for the crowd that turned out.

The Uline Arena, often the scene of prize fights and wrestling matches, was jammed to the walls. The seats in the stands were taken early, and hundreds sat down on the floor munching their chicken.

It was George Montgomery of Hollywood, master of ceremonies, who announced that 12,000 were inside the arena and that 3000 had been turned away outside. Some disputed the figures, but there was no doubt that the place was filled to capacity and then some.

"If anybody had told me this would happen in Washington, D. C.," Montgomery told the throng, "I would hardly have believed them."

Ends With Square Dancing

The box-supper rally, which was sponsored by the Republicans of Congress and the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, started off with band music, marching and singing, and ended with square dancing.

Sandwiched in between was the oratory, notable because the orators were limited to two minutes.

Senator Taft, after getting an ovation from the crowd, defended the Taft-Hartley Act, and in doing so departed from his text to take a sarcastic thrust at President Truman. Speaking of the law that bears his name, the Ohioan said:

"It has given the President power to protect the public against threats to its safety and health, and he is finally using it."

Taft was, of course, alluding to President Truman's action in invoking the provisions of the act against John L. Lewis' coal miners.

Senator Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota evoked cheers and laughter when he mentioned the Alger Hiss case and recalled Mr. Truman's remark about a red herring.

Eating "Herring," He Says

He told the chicken eaters that there were some people in Washington now who are eating red herring.

Senator Owen Brewster of Maine also mentioned Hiss, as well as Judith Coplon and Britain's Dr. Fuchs. He charged that the Truman Administration, through stupidity or by design, has "coddled Communists, shielded traitors, and aided enemies of the United States."

Guy George Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, sounded a GOP battle cry that brought resounding cheers from the crowd.

"From this night on," Gabrielson said, "the Republican Party is going to be the strongest, most active and vigorous opposition party that has ever been known in the history of our country.

"We are at present the minority party, but we have no intention of remaining so—and we mean to become the majority party in 1950, and with the help of all patriotic Americans who believe in constitutional government, to elect a Republican President and Vice President in 1952."

Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana assailed the Truman Administration for getting the Treasury into the red.

"Mr. Spender-in-Chief," said Halleck, referring to President Truman, "has again sounded the call. He wants more taxes."

Halleck called for reduced taxes, a balanced budget, and a sound economy.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican leader of the Senate, also struck at Democratic extravagance and said:

"Carry this issue to the country, and we will elect a Republican majority in both Houses of Congress in 1950—and a Republican President in 1952."

Criticizes 'Handout' Rule

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine said she hoped the rally would start Americans down a road leading away from "government by handout."

She expressed hope that it would start America back to the most cherished of all freedoms—"the freedom to be let alone."

Senator Homer E. Capehart of Indiana tore into the Administration for trying to "Trumanize and socialize the practice of medicine."

"They ignore the failure of the British experiment," Capehart cried. "The power-drunk dreamers want to herd the American people into regimented groups and assign them to doctors and dentists who are identified by number as if they were in prison—well, maybe that is more than a descriptive thought.

"The idea, of course, is to make a stomach a Federal offense."

Awards were made to three musical units that took part in the rally. First prize went to the Martinsburg (W. Va.) High School Band, second prize to Drum and Bugle Corps of Palmerton, Pa., and third prize to the Washington Scottish Pipe Band.

It was announced that any profit from the rally would go to the American Heart Association.

Republican Wins Thomas' Seat temper somewhat its foreign relations position.

Lodge, chairman of the platform-drafting resolutions committee at the 1948 Republican Convention, later issued this statement:

"The declaration is a disappointment in several ways, notably in the field of civil rights where no mention was made of a forthright determination to enact legislation at this session—and to break a filibuster if necessary."

Senator Smith Disappointed

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.)) likewise told reporters she was "disappointed and unhappy with the results.

"This document is too full of vague generalities," she said. "That is fine for those who will vote Republican anyway, but what the party needs is something that will appeal to the rank and file of the people."

On the other hand, Republican old-liners and even Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who at the outset had opposed drafting an interim party stand, appeared moderately pleased with the results.

"I think it's a good statement," said Taft.

Designed for Electioneering

Frankly designed for electioneering purposes, in advance of last night's Uline arena kick-off of the GOP campaign, the declaration was "dedicated" to these higher goals:

"To win lasting peace, to build a country in which every citizen may make the most of his skill, initiative and enterprise, and to hold aloft the inspiring torch of American freedom, opportunity and justice, assuring better and happier life for all our people . . ."

The foreign relations section, while critical of Administration conduct of foreign policy, steered clear of any isolationist sentiment. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) is said to have drafted the major portion of this section. Vandenberg had nothing to do, however, with the references to Yalta and Potsdam, which said the two agreements had "tragic consequences . . . created new injustices and new dangers throughout the world."

Lodge is said to have complained that this language "looked backward, when we ought to be looking ahead." But it stayed in.

The foreign plank did not mention "bipartisan foreign policy" as such. But it pledged that the party will be "vigilant in critical exploration of the Administration's foreign policy" and it stressed that both parties should be consulted "in the initiation and development of a united American foreign policy."

Reaffirmed was the party's support (1) of the United Nations, (2) the inter-American system as an integral part of UN and (3) "our treaty obligations in the North Atlantic community."

The plank urged "a strong policy against the spread of Communism or Fascism at home and abroad," adding: "We insist that America's efforts toward this end be directed by those who have no sympathy either with Communism or Fascism."

ECA was indorsed, though not by name, and with certain conditions specified. The statement said those states resisting communism should be aided "only if it is essential to our national security, if it is within the total limits which the American economy can afford, if it will be effective, if it is beyond the ability of the aided nation to supply for itself, and if there is a program for progressive reduction."

And once again the party called for "a strong national defense . . . completely adequate for the security of our people.

Declaring for promotion of world trade on the basis of fair and reasonable competition, the statement said this can be done "within the Republican principle that foreign products of underpaid foreign labor shall not be admitted to this country on terms which imperil the living standards of the American workman or the American farmer, or threaten serious injury to a domestic industry."

The more sharply-worded domestic section specifically denounced these Administration items as "socialistic" importations: price and wage control, rationing, socialized medicine, regional authorities, and the Brannan plan "with its controls, penalties, fines and jail sentences."

The statement upheld, however, the Government's right to "use its just powers to foster national health, promote real security for the aged, develop sound agricultural and labor management policies and advance civil rights."

To strengthen the Republicans urged (1) balanced budget (2) cuts in spending (3) Hoover report economies (4) general tax reduction as rapidly as spending cuts permit (5) enforcement of anti-monopoly laws and (6) creation of a non-partisan commission to consider "sensible redistribution" of governmental functions and sources of revenue between Federal, State and local governments.

The civil rights plank, which Lodge objected failed to bind the party to enactment of a program this session, was presented in these 50 words:

"The right of equal opportunity to work, to vote, to advance in life and to be protected under the law should never be limited in any individual because of race, religion, color or country of origin. Therefore, we shall continue to sponsor legislation to protect the rights of minorities."

The labor plank called for continuation of the Taft-Hartley Act and enactment of "such improvements . . . as have been shown to be necessary."

Lodge tried and failed to strike out all reference to the Taft-Hartley Act, substituting a new plank spelling out what the Republican Party stands for in labor-management relations.

A veterans plank, pledging that GI's and their widows and orphans "must never be forgotten" and a lengthy farm plank, taking another slap at the Brannan Plan, rounded out the statement.

The farm plank pledged chiefly "a fair price for the farmers' products in the market place aided by a system of price supports and by protection against the dumping of competitive commodities produced by underpaid foreign labor."

McCarthy Offers Bill to Revive Food Stamp Plan

By the United Press

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), spurred by Government plans to "dump" up to 40 million bushels of surplus potatoes, yesterday introduced a bill to revive the old prewar food stamp plan for needy families.

"There's something wrong with destroying food when people are going hungry," he said. "It's a question of destroying the excess food crops or letting the people who are hungry eat them."

Meantime, the National Potato Council urged Senate Democratic leader Scott W. Lucas to lay aside any plans he may have for removing potatoes from the price support list until the growers can come up with an effective plan for curbing production.

Present Silver Spring Status Favored

The present form of government in Montgomery County is sufficiently pliable to provide all municipal services for Silver Spring regardless of its future growth, according to County Council President Frederic P. Lee.

Lee was one of four members of a panel which discussed the report by Dr. Joseph M. Ray on government in Silver Spring at last night's meeting of the Silver Spring Junior Chamber of Commerce at Stone House Inn.

The other three members of the panel agreed that Silver Spring should not become a city now.

Lee declared that he could not see how the citizens of Silver Spring could benefit on a "dollars-and-cents basis" by incorporating the community.

Dr. Ray, consultant to the University of Maryland's department of government and a panel member, reiterated the conclusion in his report that Silver Spring should retain its present status under the county government.

He conceded, however, that if its citizens are willing to pay the increased costs of incorporated government, the choice is up to them.

Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, third panel member, agreed with the findings of Dr. Ray and asserted it would be "rank foolishness" for Silver Spring to set up its own government at great expense.

The only reason a local government should conceivably be established, he said, would be "if some county council should adopt discriminatory measures against Silver Spring."

Held Unlikely

This, he added, is "highly unlikely."

The fourth member of the panel, Einar B. Christensen, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, pointed out that incorporation would not change three fourths of the municipal services which are now received from bi-county and State agencies.

The only real change, he said, would be to have government conducted by a mayor and council instead of the county council.

Mayor Eugene LeMar Kelly of Rockville acted as moderator. The meeting was conducted by Robert A. Wallace, chamber president.

Home Burns to Ground During Son's Funeral

Vincent, Ala., Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. John Bearden were watching the body of their 21-year-old son, Lester, being lowered in a grave yesterday when someone came up to them and whispered: "Your home is on fire!"

A funeral attendant rushed them back to their residence. When they arrived the house and all their furnishings were smoldering embers.

tirely covers the costs of municipal services.

The last agreement expired January 1 and there has been no agreement on a new pact. Some Greenbelt officials have charged that PHA is "stalling."

According to City Manager Charles McDonald, municipal services have been maintained until now through surplus funds, but these are near exhaustion.

The motion as offered by Councilman Thomas Canning directed that McDonald be instructed to cut off all services except police and fire protection on February 15 and to notify municipal employes their services will be terminated on that date unless funds are forthcoming from the PHA.

If the action is taken, it will mean the firing of about 35 municipal employes and the suspension of services to Greenbelt's 7200 residents.

There will be no garbage and trash collections, no health services, no recreation program, no maintenance of streets and sewers, if the employes are dismissed.

One Greenbelt official hinted of a widespread rent strike if the PHA permits municipal services to lapse.

Death Sentence Given In Slaying of 6-Year-Old

Los Angeles, Feb. 6 (AP).—Fred Stroble today was ordered to die in the gas chamber for the slaying of 6-year-old Linda Joyce Glucoff.

Superior Judge Charles W. Fricke pronounced sentence, ending the 68-year-old former banker's fight for a new sanity trial.

Stroble was convicted by a jury of murder in the first degree, with no recommendation for leniency. He had pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. Stroble admitted choking, hacking, stabbing and bludgeoning the girl to death last November 14.

Valentine to Get His Day in Court Valentine's Day

February 14 will be Valentine's Day in more ways than one in Municipal Court.

That's the day when Albert Leon Valentine, 29, of 1018 Howard rd. se., will reappear for a hearing on a charge of grand larceny.

The date was suggested by Judge Walter D. Casey yesterday, when Valentine made his first appearance in court. He had been arrested Sunday in connection with the theft of $125 worth of pipe from a construction company.

The Government asked for a continuance with February 13 suggested as the date.

Truman Action Asked In School Controversy

A presidential intervention and fact-finding committee was asked yesterday in the dispute over whether Negro students from overcrowded Cardozo High School shall be transferred to Central High School, now white.

J. Edgar Brown, director of the National Negro Council, telegraphed President Truman asking him to step into the controversy and appoint the committee. Brown criticized the present deadlock in the Board of Education over the transfer proposal. The Board's committee on buildings and grounds has recommended the change, but the Board, last week, deferred action.

U. S. Agencies Upheld In 5 Court Cases

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld five different Government agencies against legal assaults on their actions.

In a sixth opinion, the Court, in a 5-to-3 split, construed the ban on interstate shipment of obscene matter to include phonograph records. Justice Black and two colleagues, however, dissented on the grounds such a judicial addition to the law could lead to abridgment of free expression.

These were the decisions involving Government agencies:

1. The Court upheld, 7-to-1, the 1948 Sugar Act and the Secretary of Agriculture whose administration of the act was attacked by Puerto Rico and two companies there. The Secretary set sugar quotas for the island's firms but Justice Frankfurter, for the majority, said the court is "not a tribunal for relief from the crudities and inequities of complicated experimental economic legislation." The Court sidestepped the question of whether Puerto Rico, an American possession, could legally bring such a case.

FTC Upheld

2. The Court upheld, 7-to-0, the right of the Federal Trade Commission to require corporations (the Morton Salt and International Salt companies) to file reports showing how they have complied with a cease and desist order. The firms had been ordered to halt an alleged "conspiracy" to fix prices and control salt production.

3. The Court upheld, 6-to-2, the Civil Aeronautics Board's award of a 1700-mile airline route in the Carolinas and Virginia to Piedmont Aviation, Inc. Justice Black's majority opinion found that the CAB had acted within the intent of Congress.

4. The Court held, 8-to-0, that a Wyoming concern could not sue the Secretary of the Interior to prevent him from leasing Federal coal land to a competing business firm. The Sheridan-Wyoming Coal Co. had contended Federal law bars new coal mines on Federal property unless there is a coal need and objected to granting a lease to Big Horn Coal Co.

5. The Court upheld the Veterans' Administration against a California State court decision applying the community property laws to GI insurance benefits. An Army major had named his mother as beneficiary of a $10,000 policy but the State court ruled half the proceeds should go to the widow under the community property law.

Obscene Records

In the phonograph case, the Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco had thrown out the conviction of Alexander Lawrence Alpers. He had been fined $200 for shipping obscene records by express.

Justice Minton, for the majority, held that records could be construed to be included in the ban on shipment of any "obscene . . . book, pamphlet, picture, motion-picture film, paper, letter, writing, print, or other matter of indecent character."

Justice Minton said the court was not holding that the statute was "all-inclusive" but that it did "proscribe the dissemination of matter which, in its essential nature, communicates obscene ideas."

But Justice Black said criminal statutes should be precise, that motion pictures had been added to the original ban in 1920 and that the Justice Department had asked for the addition of phonograph records while it was bringing this case to the high court.

"History is not lacking in proof," he said in an opinion joined by Justices Frankfurter and Jackson, "that statutes like this may readily be converted into instruments for dangerous abridgments of freedom of expression."

Justice Black said the courts should not "add to the list of items banned by Congress."

Though this particular "judicial addition" may be "small," Justice Black added that "it is accompanied by a technique of broad interpretation which too often may be successfully invoked by the many people who want the law to proscribe what other people may say, write, hear, see or read."

Polish Club to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Polish Club of Washington, group 848, P. N. A., will be held Wednesday at 8:15 p. m. at the Stansbury Temple, 5832 Georgia ave. nw. A movie, featuring Josef Hofmann, famous Polish pianist, will be shown.

Producers Told

Dairy Product Pile-up May Pose Problem

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Knox T. Hutchinson said yesterday the accumulation of surplus dairy products under the present Government price support program will become serious if the program is continued.

Hutchinson, who was addressing the thirtieth annual noonday banquet of the Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Association, called for the Brannan direct-payment plan instead of what he termed the "inadequate, inefficient price support program."

More than 1600 members of the association, families and friends packed three dining rooms of the Statler Hotel for the annual banquet.

The banquet—which included plenty of milk produced by the association members—was preceded by a business meeting. There, Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the association, reported a new high in milk sales, amounting to nearly half a billion pounds, during last year.

Derrick said the cooperative, which markets about 85 percent of the milk consumed in the Washington area, sold 25 million dollars' worth for the producers during 1949. Sales of fluid milk and cream were 3.7 percent more than in 1948, and slightly more than the 1946 amount, he said.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, banquet toastmaster, said "there are some who say" that cooperation in milk production and marketing is "conspiracy in restraint of trade, but I say we should have more of this cooperation."

D. C. Had Lower '48 Traffic Death Rate Than States

The District had a lower traffic death rate, on a population basis, than any State in the Union in 1948, according to figures made public yesterday by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

With 69 deaths listed, the District rate was eight deaths per 100,000 of population. Maryland had 423 motor vehicle deaths for a rate of 19.6 per 100,000, and Virginia showed 748, for a rate of 24.5.

In deaths from other types of accidents, the District did not fare so well. With 407 deaths here, the rate was 47.2 per 100,000 of population. Maryland reported 974 for a rate of 45.2 per 100,000, and Virginia, 1392 others for a rate of 45.6. The national motor vehicle death rate was 22.1 per 100,000 and from other accidents, 45 per 100,000 of population.

Meet Frances Buss— Another Do-it-Yourself American!

New frontiers of opportunity are still wide open in America . . . for folks with ideas, ambition, and drive. And there are plenty of people on every Main Street who are making this "Do-It-Yourself Spirit" pay off! These men and women don't go for spoon-fed security. They'd rather make their own, on their own. Take the example of Frances Buss, who hails from St. Louis, Missouri . . .

Behind the television cameras she found a full-time career

A director-producer at 32!

Watch her at work behind the television cameras, and you'd never know that Frances Buss had been the studio's receptionist a few years ago!

But Fran had planned it that way. In 1941 she decided to stake her future career on learning the television business, growing with it. To get a foot in the door she started as receptionist, then volunteered to tackle any job, on stage or off.

From stand-in to bit parts, sign-painting to script-writing, it all pointed toward Fran's goal. She learned camera technics on the side; refused to let the fact this was "a man's job" discourage her. Five years ago she won her chance to run her own show. It clicked! And today she's the only woman director-producer on CBS-TV!

"There are plenty of new frontiers for women today," says Fran, "if you decide on your goal, stick at it, on your own!" And that's how to make the best security for the future, too.

You'll find most folks in America today have Fran's "Do-It-Yourself Spirit." One proof is in the fact that 80 million Americans—4 out of 5 families—voluntarily take care of their own future through life insurance. And because life insurance is used by so many, the life insurance business has naturally grown in size.

Yet life insurance serves at an intimate, personal level. Trained agents bring their help to families on every Main Street. To do this, there are 150,000 trained agents, representing 584 individual, competing companies, helping American families help themselves.

Life Insurance is an open book...

It's a fact that women and children have by far the greatest stake in life insurance . . . because:

- Women themselves hold about 20% of all life insurance in force.
- Currently, women buy about 15% of the new life insurance issued in the U. S.
- The basic purpose of life insurance has always been the protection of the family, with benefits, upon the death of the breadwinner, going to widows and mothers, sons and daughters.

If you have not talked over your family's insurance plans recently, do it tonight! Life insurance is a family affair. To make sure you're getting the most out of your present life insurance, see your agent. The Institute of Life Insurance—central source of information—60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

Machinists Invited Back Into AFL Fold

To Bar Ouster

Office Union Denied CIO Injunction

A suit brought in District Court by the United Office and Professional Workers to prevent its possible expulsion from the CIO was dismissed yesterday.

The UOPWA filed the suit after a CIO body held hearings on charges that the UOPWA "consistently" was following a program like that of the Communist Party.

Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews ruled that the office workers body had not exhausted its administrative remedies in the CIO and that under such circumstances the court would decline to intervene in the internal management of a labor union.

She pointed out that the CIO had not removed the UOPWA from its organization and that it was possible that the parent organization might exonerate the office workers union without court interference.

Red Cross Unit Starts Drive at Luncheon Today

The special gifts committee for the 1950 Red Cross Metropolitan Washington Campaign will launch its drive at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today at Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw.

Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, commanding officer of the Army Medical Center, will speak.

P.Y.K. Howat, chairman of the unit will preside, and J. Clifford Folger, chairman of the District Red Cross, will discuss the drive for $1,039,000.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor's executive council today voted to extend a formal invitation to the now-independent machinists' union to return to the AFL.

The council acted over the objection of one of its members, William Hutcheson, president of the powerful AFL Carpenters' Union.

Hutcheson — whose squabble with the Machinists was the reason that union left the AFL five years ago—threatened to pull his own union out of the AFL if the Machinists are taken back without a prior settlement of differences between the two unions.

The council vote on extending an invitation for return of the Machinists was unanimous—with Hutcheson refraining from voting.

William Green, AFL president, told newsmen the invitation will be issued at the end of a 60-day period, with the intervening time devoted to seeking settlement of various jurisdictional controversies between Machinists and Carpenters unions and between the Machinists and other AFL unions.

Green said the invitation for the machinists' return will be issued at the end of the 60-day period regardless of whether the jurisdictional fights are settled—with "anything still hanging" concerning the disputes left for settlement after the machinists reenter the AFL.

It probably will be five or six months before the 600,000-member Machinists' Union—the full name of which is the International Association of Machinists—can formally return to the AFL's fold.

The Machinists were represented at today's negotiations by Al Hayes, IAM president; Eric Peterson, secretary-treasurer, and Elmer Walker, vice president.

Hayes told newsmen the IAM was anxious to get back into the AFL and said he hoped "the day will not be far away when the CIO will join the AFL, too, so we all can deal better with our common problems."

temporarily, the contract dispute between Lewis and the operators.

The United Mine Workers' contract expired last July 1. The 400,000 UMW soft coal miners have been working three-day, two-day and no-day work weeks, at the orders of Lewis or at their own disposition, in an effort to win a new contract with "improved" benefits from the operators.

The miners are seeking principally a 95-cent-a-day pay raise, to $15 a day; a 15-cent-a-ton increase in welfare fund royalties, to 35 cents a ton. The operators wish to continue the old rates, loosen Lewis' control over the suspended welfare fund, and eliminate the "willing and able" clause, which permits Lewis to call out the miners at will.

Last week Truman suggested a 70-day truce while a fact-finding committee investigate the dispute and recommended a solution. The operators accepted, and Lewis refused. He said the miners didn't want "strangers" to meddle in their contract affairs.

Lewis, in rejecting the truce Saturday, also hinted strongly that his miners could not be coerced into digging coal against their will.

Miners Pick Up Hint

The soft-coal miners picked up the hint yesterday. About 300,000 miners who have been following Lewis' "suggestion" that they work a three-day week joined 100,000 nonconformists in their "wildcat" walkout. Their reaction to the President's invocation of the Taft-Hartley Act, as reported by the wire services, is aptly expressed in the words of one miner interviewed at Uniontown, Pa.

"The men are madder than hell," he said.

President Truman, in declaring a "national emergency" yesterday, named three long-experienced labor dispute arbitrators to the board of inquiry, which under the Taft-Hartley Act investigates and reports to the President on the dispute, but makes no recommendations. Mr. Truman asked the board to report to him by next Monday.

The board includes:

David L. Cole, Paterson, N. J., chairman. Cole, a lawyer, headed a similar board in 1948, which settled a bitter contract argument between Lewis and the operators, and thereby headed off an injunction. He was also a member of the President's fact-finding board in last year's steel industry dispute.

John Dunlop, Harvard economics professor. He has been the arbiter in jurisdictional disputes between the AFL building trades and the contracting industry. He has served on several mediation and arbitration panels, and did special work for the War Labor Board.

A Willard Wirtz, Northwestern U. law professor. He is former chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board.

The board members rushed here to meet last night.

Once he receives the board's report, the President can go to Federal Court and through the Attorney General's office obtain an injunction ordering Lewis and the UMW to send the miners back to work for 80 days while efforts are made to resolve the dispute.

Twice since the end of the war Lewis and the union have refused to obey similar court orders and have been fined a total of more than two million dollars.

legally eligible to walk out, respect the picket line of the strikers.

In Washington, CWA planned to pull out about 500 employes of Western Electric, a Bell manufacturing subsidiary, and create a work stoppage of 5500 employes of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. through picket lines flung up around all C. & P. buildings here.

Request for the 16-day truce was made by Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

He urged "intensified" collective bargaining, in a wire to the union and Bell affiliates, and said: "If the strike should occur . . . the public will suffer a substantial impairment and, perhaps, a complete stoppage of service in our national system of telephone communication.

"The employers and the union must ask themselves whether they are prepared to take responsibility for the harm that such a strike would inflict upon our domestic economy and society, and the blow it would deal to our national prestige abroad.

"Both sides should consider whether they have brought to the bargaining session that firm resolution to reach agreement without resort to economic force at the expense of the public which is expected of employers and unions engaged in the performance of essential public services.

"I hold the opinion that these disputes can be peaceably resolved by collective bargaining, provided the parties are disposed to make a reasonable accommodation of their private needs and desires to the broader interests of the public."

Ching asked the disputants to answer his request by noon today, and that if the postponement is accepted, to report to him on the progress of negotiations by noon of February 20.

Members of Divisions 36 and 50 of the telephone workers' union will have a joint meeting at 8:30 tonight at Turner's Arena to discuss the current negotiations with the local telephone company.

Both Sides Deny Atomic Post Was Offered Luckman

Both the White House and Charles Luckman denied that Luckman has been offered the job of chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Sunday both had been noncommittal about the report. Luckman had said, "I will not deny or confirm the report."

In New York yesterday, he said, "The job has not been offered. I know nothing about it." A White House spokesman also said the job had not been offered him. Luckman recently left his post as president of Lever Brothers Co.

The New York Times reported yesterday that W. Averell Harriman, Economic Cooperation Administration "roving ambassador" in Europe, and Wilson W. Wyatt, former Federal Housing Administrator, were being mentioned for the AEC chairmanship. It becomes vacant February 15 when David E. Lilienthal resigns.

City Heads Ask Coal Sales Cut

The Commissioners yesterday requested District coal dealers to restrict sales but said there is "no immediate coal crisis" in the city.

Cooperation with the request was pledged by the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

The Commissioners asked dealers to limit home deliveries of hard coal to not more than two tons a customer.

Soft coal deliveries are to be restricted to consumers whose supply is down to less than one week. Deliveries are not to exceed a week's supply.

The request was made to conserve stocks and to avoid "panic buying or hoarding of coal" on the part of the public, the Commissioners said.

The request was issued yesterday after a meeting in the office of Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young.

Tax On Symphonies

Reports that the National Symphony Orchestra sustaining fund is 50 percent undersubscribed in the last week of the campaign suggests that many Washingtonians who enjoy good music have not yet responded to the appeal. Part of the difficulty lies in the shortage of volunteer canvassers. Yet there is scarcely a person in this Capital City who does not benefit, directly or indirectly, from the existence of this live and growing cultural organization. We urge Washingtonians who have not been contacted to take matters into their own hands and mail their checks to the National Symphony at 1727 K st. nw.

Although this aspect of symphony support is a job for the people of Washington, there is one important step Congress could take to benefit symphonies generally. That would be to remove the 20 percent excise on symphony admissions. Up till 1941 symphony societies were specifically exempted from amusement taxes. The tax, first of 10 percent and then of 20 percent, was viewed as a wartime revenue measure, and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau promised that the increase would be withdrawn on termination of the war.

There is a good argument against any general moratorium on admissions taxes in view of the unbalanced Federal budget. Symphonies, however, perform a quasi-educational function and they are not run for profit. Indeed, contributions to such orchestras are viewed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue as charitable gifts and are tax-exempt. Abroad music in some form or other is state-supported on the ground that it is educational.

Twenty-six symphonies throughout the country incurred operating deficits of some 3½ million dollars during the 1947-48 season. Most of this loss was made up through appeals such as the National Symphony is now conducting. Even if the approximately one million dollars paid in symphony admissions taxes had all been pledged to support of the orchestras, public campaigns still would have been necessary. There is no question, however, that taxes on tickets do exert a negative influence on symphony attendance. It would cost the Federal Government little to restore the admission tax exemption, thus recognizing the element of public service inherent in the work of the Nation's symphony orchestras.

Lord Norman

The death of Lord Norman will revive memories of the time when the Bank of England, which Lord Norman headed as Montagu C. Norman for 24 years till his retirement in 1944, was the decisive power in world finance. It is that no longer. It is not even decisive in Britain where, as here, the government is the money authority. Lord Norman thus crossed an era as well as a generation in his governorship. He was most powerful, perhaps, immediately after the First World War. The British wished again to tie their currency to the gold standard, but they could not take action till the floating war debt to America had been consolidated into a long-term obligation. Lord Norman was a member of the war-debt funding delegation to America under the chairmanship of Mr. Stanley Baldwin. It is said that it was at his insistence that the British agreed to amortize the vast indebtedness at 3.3 percent interest. Mr. Baldwin was lukewarm, and the Bonar Law government, when the settlement was submitted to it, almost refused to accept it. Only the pressure from Governor Norman persuaded the British cabinet to ratify the handiwork of the Baldwin mission. Lord Norman wanted the debt consolidated, no matter what the terms, in order to put sterling on the gold standard.

There was not as much argument in Britain over the debt settlement as over the problem of the rate at which sterling should be rejoined to gold. Again Lord Norman's influence was decisive. He stood for the prewar parity with the gold dollar, $4.86 plus, as against the lesser rate that the industrialists demanded. As it happened, the industrialists were on the side of the economic facts, for the pound was overvalued at $4.86. The result was a prolonged depression culminating in the general strike of 1926. Of course, the dollar-pound rate could have been normalized by a broad reduction in British costs, particularly wages. But the workers would not agree to the required deflation at the behest of men who, out of regard both for pride and for the proud position of the British pound in the world, wished to see the pound "look the dollar in the face," as the purists mystically put it. At any rate, the dollar-pound rate could not be held, and in 1931 the British again deserted the gold standard. They are still off the gold standard, and look like staying off—and thus keeping an inconvertible currency—as long as the Labor government remains in office, for a controlled economic system and a free exchange system do not go together.

T-H At Last

It is difficult to see how any reasonable person could quarrel with President Truman's invocation of the Taft-Hartley Act in the coal dispute. Indeed, the only criticism of the President that seems to us valid is that he waited until the emergency had assumed rather serious proportions before utilizing his power. His decision came only after John L. Lewis had flatly rejected the White House proposal to appoint a voluntary fact-finding board and another industry-wide strike had gotten under way. The miners forced the President's hand, and they will have to take the consequences.

Now that the law has been invoked it will have to run its course. As soon as the President's emergency fact-finding board reports back one week hence, he will presumably ask the Attorney General to seek an 80-day injunction against the strike if it is still in effect. The precedents suggest that such an injunction will be granted and that the United Mine Workers will be heavily fined if the strike is not abandoned. The issue has boiled down, as President Truman indicated to his congressional visitors yesterday, to a question of enforcing the law in the national interest. On this question (regardless of what may be the merits or the demerits of the miners' demands upon their employers) there can be only one right answer. Impotence is one thing that no government can afford to show.

The miners can avoid a show of force by returning immediately to their jobs while further efforts are made to work out the terms of a new contract. Or they can wait until a court order directs them to give up their strike. Mr. Lewis went so far in his reply to the President to hint that the miners might not obey a court injunction. But that is probably bluff. Having paid two whopping fines in recent years for disobeying court orders, we doubt that the union will deliberately invite another. But if it should—if the strike should continue in spite of an injunction, at the cost of chaos in our national economy—Congress would have to step in to meet the emergency. No group can be permitted to defy the Government when its power is invoked to protect the public interest. It will be better for all concerned if the United Mine Workers and especially Mr. Lewis understand from the very beginning of the Government's intervention that dictation and coercion are at an end.

Budget Pruning

Section 138 of the Reorganization Act providing for a legislative budget is a dead letter, and should be replaced by a workable substitute providing congressional appropriations committees with the information required to do an intelligent job of budget pruning. The joint congressional committee set up under this act includes all the members of the four appropriating and taxing committees of both houses. It is handicapped by sheer size. Furthermore, the committee is required to report its estimates of over-all receipts and expenditures, with accompanying recommendations, much too early in the session. Senator McClellan proposes to correct these defects by replacing this unwieldy committee by a small body consisting of five members of the House Committee on Appropriations and an equal number of members of the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The budget committee's work would be continuous; it would be assisted by an adequate technical staff; and it could call on Government agencies to transmit duplicates of all requests for funds submitted to the Budget Bureau.

This procedure would enable the budget committee to assemble detailed information on all the items contained in the executive budget, and the utilization of such data by the committees on appropriations would speed up legislative processes, now delayed by long and tedious hearings.

As Senator McClellan notes, the need for the services of a really effective legislative budget committee has been accentuated by the decision to combine all appropriation measures in a single bill. For it will be late in the session before the House will act on the omnibus bill, and the Senate Appropriations Committee will have little time to consider it before the end of the fiscal year. However, if both the House and Senate Appropriations Committees were supplied in advance with detailed, up-to-date information on the budget and given time to study the recommendations of the budget committee, an omnibus bill could be disposed of without undue delay.

Wisely, in our opinion, the McClellan bill does not authorize the reconstituted budget committee to report directly to Congress. It would be a strictly service committee, making reports to the appropriations committees and, in some cases, to other standing committees of both houses. The effectiveness of the plan would depend very largely upon the caliber of the experts employed to assist the budget committee, and on the size of the staff. It would cost a good deal to build up an organization equipped to do a good job of screening executive budgetary requests, but the money spent for such purposes would undoubtedly yield rich dividends by cutting down wasteful and discouraging excessive expenditures.

There is some danger that the authorization given the budget committee under the bill to examine the records of Government agencies and request them to furnish estimates of their budget requirements might bring it into conflict with the Budget Bureau. However, Senator McClellan stresses the fact that the purpose of the proposed legislation is not to hamper the Budget Bureau, but simply to enable Congress to discharge its responsibility for fiscal policies more intelligently. If Congress keeps that implied admonition in mind, we believe that adoption of the McClellan proposal would result in better working relationships between the legislative and executive branches of Government, which are jointly responsible for the formulation of taxing and spending programs.

Power Over The H-Bomb

Two Senators have added an important postscript to President Truman's statement on the hydrogen bomb. Senator Donnell asked Senator McMahon, chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, what was the legal basis of the President's decision to go ahead with the H-bomb. Senator McMahon replied that the act creating the Atomic Energy Commission provides that the President shall determine the number of atomic bombs to be made and give his decision to the commission once a year. It was therefore up to the President, he said, to give the initial order on the H-bomb. "As to its implementation," he added, "of course the Congress of the United States must exercise its power by way of appropriations, if in no other way."

Senator Donnell pointed out, however, that the President did not base his action upon any authority conferred by the Atomic Energy Act but rather on his responsibility as Commander in Chief of the armed forces. What the President said was:

> It is part of my responsibility as Commander in Chief of the armed forces to see to it that our country is able to defend itself against any possible aggressor. Accordingly I have directed the Atomic Energy Commission to continue its work on all forms of atomic weapons, including the so-called hydrogen or superbomb.

Previously the President had told the press that he, and no one else, would make the decision as to whether the United States should produce the H-bomb. There has never been any question, of course, as to the President's authority, under the Atomic Energy Act, to go as far as present funds permit in promoting work on any type of atomic fission. Nor is there serious question as to the desirability of his decision to make the H-bomb. But it is good to have him reminded from the floor of the Senate that the decision which he has presumed to make alone is subject to the approval of Congress through the appropriating power. If Congress should vote to cut off all funds for atomic energy development, Senator McMahon said, "I do not suppose there would be much the President could do about it."

Senator Donnell also drove home the point that the power to order and control the making of weapons stems from Congress and not from the President. The Constitution gives to Congress the appropriating power, the legislative power, and the power to make rules regulating the property belonging to the United States. The Senator might also have noted, as we recently did on this page, that the Constitution gives to Congress the power to "raise and support armies," which includes the power of supplying armies with weapons. In his statement on the H-bomb the President spoke as if this power belonged alone to him.

It is not a trivial matter in a free country to keep the lines of governmental power straight. If the President had the power to which he lay claim, he could use his office as Commander in Chief to make himself a dictator or tyrant. We are glad that two Senators who approve his H-bomb policy have seen fit to remind Mr. Truman that the Constitution gives him no power to "go it alone" in such immense undertakings.

Army Reservists

In reorganizing its reserve program to provide a more realistic type of training, the Army has acted to correct a flaw of long standing. Confusion has characterized the reserve program since the war. The fact is that, aside from the work of actual units preparing for mobilization, much reserve training has had little relation to military necessity Reserve officers and enlisted men have met every two weeks or so to hear boring general lectures or to be entertained by talks having no bearing on their assignments. They have been held together partly by patriotism and partly by the inducement of occasional pay and eventual pensions if they accumulate enough training points.

Reservists have particular reason to be miffed with the Army over the matter of training pay. The Army made a big point of pay inducement, and the response was great—so great, in fact, that in December pay was suspended in effect to all but "Class A" organized units. The overexpansion of the reserve and the consequent threatened overobligation of funds reflected shoddy planning somewhere—for it was not the reservists but the Army itself that raised the issue of remuneration.

After a thorough study of the reserve program, the Army apparently is convinced that security lies not in an amorphous mass of reservists, but in organized units training for specific jobs. Hence the decision to consolidate 18,000 training units, many with only a few men, into 9000 and to get away from the general training concept. Emphasis will be on unit training for specific assignments, and persons in the so-called volunteer reserve who cannot fill places in mobilization units will be encouraged to attend school centers where they may receive adequate instruction in their specialties. The change of emphasis is a welcome move to end abstractions and make the reserve training program more meaningful.

Acheson And Jefferson

From within the shadow of Monticello, I heard the other day of the Secretary of State's statement after the Hiss verdict. It immediately occurred to me how proud Thomas Jefferson would have been of his successor's nobility and courage. Mr. Jefferson's overwhelming pride, I imagine, would have had to give way immediately to profound disgust and horror at the spectacle of simple words of honor and faith producing howls of contumely from the corrupt and moans of despair from the decent. Mr. Jefferson indeed would have wept. It is time perhaps for the Exorcist—for which role I believe my friend, Dean Acheson, our great Secretary of State, is well fitted.

"Latchkey Children"

There is no doubt that Agnes Meyer has done a real social service in presenting the school situation in Prince Georges County. I do wish to take issue, however, with her January 29 article on latchkey children.

Unquestionably children of lower-class parents who must be away from home working at all hours are roaming the streets and finding unsavory amusements and trouble. This is particularly true in the Negro ghettos of our city. But is this merely the result of mothers at work or does the cause go deeper?

Most of the apartment projects attract middle and upper middle class Government and professional people. Around the projects, these homes are mainly of middle income groups and it is doubtful even a small percentage of the mothers in these homes are employed.

The time lag between school closing at 3:30 p. m. and the arrival home of parents around 6 is not so great that the children must feel neglected. And how many children whose mothers are home stay home after school?

The schools cannot be expected to plan for all of a child's waking hours.

Are not these adolescents and children on the loose reflective of ourselves in our lack of real values, our substitution of material things and so-called pleasures; our restlessness and insecurity in this age between wars; our women's boredom with their routine-filled servant's lives?

I feel that many working mothers might be given a word of praise for managing as well as they do; for adding to the income of the family; for combining both a home and a service to the Government or to a business. Perhaps the desires of these women to be more than mothers, wives and housemaids is a good trend toward the time when women will take a real part not only in the home but in the life of the Nation, when the communities will join together in providing worth-while activities for the children under trained leaders.

Numbers Writers

The civic committee of the Baptist Ministers Conference of the District of Columbia and vicinity wishes to take this method of expressing our appreciation to The Washington Post for the publicity given to the arrest of an alleged numbers writer as it appeared in your January 31 issue.

The said Lawrence Fields is not known to any member of this committee. However, the committee feels that he rendered a unique civic service when he "insisted" that one officer, Cecil Jones, would "lock him up" for writing numbers.

Since it appears that the Police Department is unaware of the public nuisance which numbers writing has become in the District of Columbia, it may be a good thing if a few more number writers will "insist" upon being "locked up" in order to make our city a decent place in which to live.

Suitland High School

The Suitland Businessmen's Association, in its regular meeting on January 24, unanimously voted in opposition to the present plan of naming the new high school to be erected in Suitland after any past superintendent of schools, and further unanimously voted in favor of the name of Suitland High School as being more appropriate. I hope that our action will be given consideration before the selection of a name for this school.

Insurance Tax

I have just read that the "House Passes Bill Imposing Insurance Tax." This is one of Mr. Truman's proposals that will raise 90 million dollars in taxes from heretofore untaxed income of insurance companies.

The insurance companies have earnestly opposed the socialistic compulsory national health insurance program advocated by President Truman. They have gained enormous numbers of subscribers to their own voluntary health insurance policies. No doubt the President hopes this sudden heavy taxation will cause the insurance companies to resort to a raise in premium costs, thereby—he hopes—making voluntary health insurance less attractive to the public.

President Truman also is ordering the FBI to investigate the various State medical societies in vain hope of unearthing evidence of a "medical trust" and/or tax frauds. This is, of course, the President's way of striking back at the American Medical Association and at American doctors who have so sincerely devoted themselves to the defense of their profession lest it succumb, under Truman's compulsory national health insurance, to a chaotic mess, as in England.

Economic Aid To Korea

I doubt if any blunder, or combination of blunders, could be better calculated to undermine American prestige in Asia than congressional refusal to continue economic aid to the American-sponsored Republic of Korea.

Representative Vorys' contention that there is "no promise, no commitment, no obligation," is bewildering. One can only assume that Mr. Vorys, in some strange way, has been denied knowledge of the American liberation and occupation of southern Korea; of the series of historic events which led to the United Nations-United States sponsored general election and culminated in United States recognition of the Republic of Korea. Anyone conversant with these events must agree that there were promises, there are commitments and, above all, there is a moral obligation.

In this context it is, perhaps, well to remember that the Republic of Korea is, to a considerable degree, the creation of the American occupation authorities and, in effect, a by-product of Western resistance to Russian expansion.

I have no wish to criticize the American occupation. United States intentions for the unification and independence of Korea are, I believe, sound and sincere. The problems confronting the occupation authorities were of a peculiarly complex nature. Occupational personnel to an unfortunate extent, were woefully unqualified for the tasks to which they were put. Mistakes and errors of judgment were necessarily many and often of serious consequence. Current maladministration in certain departments of the Korean government results, at least in part, from our mistakes and errors of judgment.

To assume that our program of economic aid is doomed because of the "North Korean threat" is sheer defeatism. It is also contrary to the facts. The hundreds of thousands of North Koreans who, since the formation of the Soviet sponsored Peoples' Republic, have crossed the thirty-eighth parallel into South Korea give substance to the contention that communism is incompatible with the Korean character and temperament. This mass exodus from the Communist North also raises the question whether, under existing conditions, the rulers of the Peoples' Republic would dare provoke—or the Russians dare instigate—full-scale civil war.

Our obligation to Korea includes not only continued economic and technical assistance but continued advice, prodding, and frank criticism of all unsound or undemocratic practices. It calls for capable administration of an ECA program premised on the understanding that continued aid is contingent on whole-hearted and efficient cooperation by the Korean government, strict adherence to democratic practices and ideals in the administration of all branches of government and the abolishment of all privileged "quasi-governmental" organizations.

In the U. N. supervised general election of 1948 the people of Southern Korea learned the basic mechanism of democracy and demonstrated their capability in the use of that mechanism. What is needed now, equally with economic and technical assistance, is the guidance and encouragement of a functional information program (USIS), positive and prodemocratic in concept and directed toward the correction or prevention of abuses and excesses, in public and private life, through the creation of a well-informed and vocal Korean public opinion. What Korea needs is instruction in how to make democracy work in Korea under existing conditions and with frank appraisal of the native traditions, foreign influences and other factors which might help or hinder its progress.

I am confident that when Congress has given careful consideration to all of the facts an overwhelming majority of both Houses will vote for continued and adequate economic aid to Korea.

Truman And The H-Bomb

By Marquis Childs

Isolated White House

ONE EFFECT of the hydrogen bomb is apparent already. It has widened the gap between the President and the country. The man in the White House is more isolated.

A symptom of this isolation is apparent in Mr. Truman's relations with the press and in particular over the issue of the H-bomb. On each side of the divide suspicion and even hostility are growing. This is, moreover, a symptom of an attitude common in a considerable section of the Truman Administration.

Because it can have such serious consequences at this precarious moment in the world crisis, it seems to me important to try to understand how the President, himself, feels about these matters. Here is an authoritative view of the President and the press as seen from the White House.

Over a period of months, and especially since the campaign in the fall of 1948, the President has come to feel about the press more or less as did Franklin Roosevelt in the latter phase of the New Deal. As with Roosevelt, there has been a growing doubt, in view of the way in which elections turn out, as to the influence of the press and the degree to which it represents public opinion.

In addition, there was the constant goad of reckless and irresponsible elements in press and radio. A determination that at times became something like an obsession was directed at preventing "leaks." Questions were put at White House press conferences that were felt to be deliberately insulting and beneath the dignity not of the individual but of the office. This was a marked change from the first months of the Truman Administration when the President appeared to the press as a friendly, simple man struggling to adjust to tasks of frightening scope.

AGAINST this background arose the issue of the hydrogen bomb. The fact is, of course, that the President had authorized the Atomic Energy Commission to proceed with planning and experimentation essential to the manufacture of the H-bomb well in advance of the public discussion. He took that step as Commander in Chief in what he believed to be the best interests of the security of the Nation.

Whatever else Senator Edwin Johnson achieved in his radio interview on November 1, 1949, he did alert the press to the development of a new "superbomb." Three years before, John J. McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of War and now High Commissioner for American occupation forces in Germany, had said more about the development and the potentialities of the bomb than Johnson.

But the disclosure by Johnson, a member of the Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy, set off the H-bomb discussion. It soon took on both sensational and controversial overtones. The President and his immediate advisers were resentful and fearful.

They were convinced the discussion was endangering America's security. The feeling was strong that development of a new weapon still in the experimental stage was not a subject for public debate. The debate would alert the Soviet Union to our intentions and spur them on to achieve the H-bomb.

IN THE State Department among some policy makers the belief was growing that a cold war could not be waged in an atmosphere of constant speculation, rumor and controversy. The harassed man in the White House resented what seemed to him an unwarranted intrusion on the dangerous ground of national security. And this, in turn, reflected the unhappy deterioration in relations between press and Government. In order to end the public debate, the President issued his terse statement.

It will not end that debate. As we have now seen in the Fuchs case, supersecrecy does not prevent the leakage of vital information. What it chiefly does is keep from the public the kind of nonsecret knowledge that would contribute to understanding and confidence. To gain public confidence something more is essential. Perhaps it is something like a council of leaders of our national life, as proposed by The Washington Post, to report to the public on the whole project.

I think many Americans want assurance of the kind of moral leadership supplied by Senator Brien McMahon in his great Senate speech. It is not enough stubbornly to stand on a plan for international control that has been discarded.

But at the same time I think it is important to try to understand the President's dilemma, caught as he is in this terrible moment at the very focus and center of authority and responsibility. The gulf must not be widened. Somehow it must be closed.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A New Approach

BETWEEN September 23 when the President announced the news of the Soviet atomic bomb and February 1 when he announced his instructions about the American hydrogen bomb, four months elapsed. That has been time enough to have done some serious work on the reconsideration of American policy. Perhaps some work has been done. For there has been some talk of how desirable it would be to do it. But Mr. Truman has given this country and the world the impression that the Baruch proposals of 1947 are substantially intact and unaffected by the unexpectedly early end of the American monopoly.

Lippmann

This impression is strengthened by Senator McMahon's heartfelt but anguished speech offering spectacular inducements if the Soviet Union, now in possession of atomic weapons, would only accept the American plan offered when it was believed the Soviet Union would need years to achieve atomic weapons. Senator McMahon is too close to the Administration on this subject not to have heard something about a new approach if in fact any new approach was being studied seriously.

IT IS HARD to believe that Mr. Acheson will be satisfied to let that impression crystallize. He cannot, and we must believe he will not, let the world and this country think that our best and only contribution to a problem which is generating such universal fear and despair is a plan which was based on false information and on a fundamental miscalculation. How can he possibly fail to recognize that our policy has to be reconsidered in the light of what we know now, but what he himself and Mr. Lilienthal and the other members of the board did not know, when the policy was first formed?

The appointment of a commission of the highest qualifications is not only desirable. It is necessary. The reexamination of our policy and of our proposals has not been done, it cannot be done, and it will not be done by administrative officials, including Mr. Acheson himself, who can devote only a little of their time and a small part of their mind and energy to it. It is a safe guess that the real reason why the Administration is still standing on the old proposals is that during these four months Mr. Acheson and his staff have been too busy with so many other things.

IT IS improbable—one must repeat—that the President and Mr. Acheson will resist the request for reexamination by a new and impartial commission. But if they did resist it, they would soon find that the solid support we have mustered in the United Nations for the Baruch plan will disintegrate. The big votes for our plan, unanimous except for the Soviet bloc, have never had so much significance as it has been fashionable and official to say they had. Our strongest allies and partners have never been so happily confident and convinced of the soundness of our proposals and the wisdom of our tactics as their recorded votes have appeared to indicate.

They assented to our leadership, and they suppressed their doubts and misgivings. They too thought we would have the monopoly of the bomb for several years more, and therefore the issue was not urgent. Moreover, they thought it expedient to present as solid front to the Russians, and also to Congress while it was considering the Marshall Plan and the military aid program.

BUT SINCE September 23 it has been certain that if we did not alter our position, the other nations would have to alter their position. For with the Soviet Union in possession of atomic weapons, the military foundations of the Atlantic Security Pact have, to put it conservatively, been shaken. The atomic bomb was their shield against the Red Army; now they must find a new shield against the atomic bomb and the hydrogen bomb.

It is not too much to say that the reason why so little has been published abroad about this strategical revolution is that the people who understand it have been stunned by it. Again and again I was told when I asked about it in Britain, in France, and in Germany that they did not dare to think out loud about a problem which was at once so terrifying and so insoluble. But that paralysis will surely pass. The human instinct to survive will impel men to think their way out of this predicament.

THERE HAVE been significant signs, even in the midst of the British election campaign, that this is coming—that our partners will not be satisfied to treat the principles of the Baruch plan as the last word on the subject. The London Times said the other day about the urgency of "seeking a new approach" that "whatever government is formed in this country after the election must give it full attention." And as an indication of the mood in which the new approach is to be sought, the Times said that "the Russian plan (for international control of atomic energy) is not so hopeless as to rule out all further negotiation, nor the American plan so obviously practicable as to require no reconsideration."

This does not mean, I take it, that the Times thinks that negotiations should now be opened with the Russians. There is a lot of work to be done here and in consultation with our partners before negotiations could lead to any good results, even to a clarification of the issues which prevent an agreement. Before we could negotiate at all, we shall have to reconsider the plan we have tried unsuccessfully to negotiate; we shall have also to reconsider the Russian proposals, looking not only for what is objectionable in them but for anything, if there is anything, which could be made acceptable.

For we shall have to remember that our premise from now on is not the American monopoly but the fact that there are two great powers each in possession of atomic weapons.

A Communication

Principle Distorted By Hiss' Defenders

By Charles S. Collier

Professor of Law, George Washington University

IN YOUR issue of January 30, there appears a letter which is captioned "Conflict of Loyalties," and signed by Messrs. Thurman Arnold, Wendell Berge and others. This letter contains the extraordinary statement . . . "we believe that Secretary Acheson has reaffirmed with great simplicity and magnificent restraint the fundamental principle that no man is guilty of crime until the courts have confirmed his guilt" . . . This remarkable statement is completely erroneous in at least three respects, which is quite a record of error, for a pronouncement signed by a number of well-known lawyers.

In the first place, Secretary Acheson, so far as the reports published in the newspapers show, made no such statement as this pronouncement of Mr. Arnold and his associates suggests.

A more accurate summary of what Mr. Acheson did or did not say is that which is presented in the column of the Alsop brothers, in your issue of February 1. The Alsops state:

"Acheson firmly refused to discuss 'anything to do with the case' itself, remarking that it would be higly improper for him to do so. He did not assert any belief in the innocence of Alger Hiss . . . If anything, Acheson's quotation (of the passage from St. Matthew) would suggest that he had been reluctantly convinced of his friend's wrongdoing."

In the second place, the statement in the Thurman Arnold letter is self-contradictory, if taken literally, and sets forth a strange doctrine with regard to the nature of the judicial process. How could the courts "confirm" a man's guilt with respect to crime unless he was already guilty? If a man was in truth innocent up until the time of the rendering of the court's judgment, how could that judgment "confirm" his guilt, or make him guilty?

The generally accepted view is that a court's judgment, at least in criminal cases, has respect to past facts and past actions only and evaluates the evidence as to what did happen actually in the past. The court's judgment is not supposed to be of a legislative nature, nor does it, in the fashion of a legislative bill of attainder create guilt where there was no guilt before.

The statement quoted is in reality a misleading and unjustifiable distortion of a familiar legal idea, namely, that an accused person is presumed to be innocent until he is proved to be guilty. But by dropping out the element that legal innocence is dealt with merely on the basis of a presumption, whether operating at the initiation of the prosecution or later, an entirely different meaning is imparted to the changed formula. We have here no longer a "fundamental principle" generally accepted, but something else, a highly debatable proposition, not generally accepted by lawyers or laymen. This twist of "legal" Scripture is not legitimate.

IN THE third place, if we take the statement of the Thurman Arnold group, in the sense that innocence is presumed merely, and may be disproved, there is still another twist, another departure from the familiar and generally accepted legal idea as to the presumption of innocence in criminal cases. This additional twist relates to the time period in the history of a criminal prosecution during which the presumption of innocence operates. As to the generally accepted legal idea on this point let me quote the text of Corpus Juris Secundum, an authoritative encyclopedic treatise, well known to all lawyers:

"Common statements of the rule are that the accused is presumed to be innocent until his guilt of the crime alleged is proved or established and such guilt must be proven or established by legal and competent evidence to the satisfaction of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt."

The key phrase in this passage as related to the issue presently under discussion is the phrase "to the satisfaction of the jury." In this formula, it is obvious that the presumption of innocence is not held to operate beyond the moment when the jury's verdict is rendered. Certainly it should not operate beyond the time when the trial judge, who has sat with the jury throughout the trial and heard all the evidence, "confirms" the verdict of guilty by entering judgment of "guilty," and sentences the defendant to a term of imprisonment or fixes other punishment.

NOW ALL these conditions precedent have been fulfilled in the Alger Hiss case. At first blush, it would actually seem that the lawyers who signed the Thurman Arnold letter had not learned of the verdict of the jury in the Hiss case and the sentence imposed on Mr. Hiss by Judge Goddard. But this is impossible in view of the fact that the Thurman Arnold letter was written in criticism of a Post editorial which itself commented on the actual verdict and judgment in the Hiss case.

The only explanation with respect to the Thurman Arnold statement that suggests itself is that the expression used therein, "no man is guilty of crime until the courts have confirmed his guilt," is intended to mean that there is no criminal guilt until the original verdict and judgment have been reviewed and confirmed by all the appellate courts that by any color of reason could be supposed to have jurisdiction to entertain an appeal.

This is a novel doctrine. I know of no decision by an appellate court that confirms any such view. The suggestion would be at variance with the common practice of committing persons convicted of crimes to commence the service of their sentences at once even though appeals have been filed, a practice illustrated in the recent action of Judge Holtzoff in the "Snags Lewis" case. If persons convicted of crime by juries and sentenced by the trial courts are not "guilty of crime until (all) the (appellate) courts have confirmed" their guilt, this well established practice is inexplicable.

THEN, AGAIN, under the view of the Thurman Arnold group, would the presumption of innocence continue until the possibility of collateral attack by habeas corpus proceedings or otherwise had been exhausted? And when, if ever, would such possibilities be totally exhausted?

The truth is that the authors of the Thurman Arnold letter want to have a novel rule with regard to the legal resumption of innocence applied in the Alger Hiss case, a rule which is inconsistent with all the leading precedents in criminal law. But just as Mr. Hiss has been and is entitled to all the usual immunities and rights of a criminal-defendant, he is likewise not entitled to an exceptionally favorable treatment brought about by an ad hoc alteration of the rules of law engineered in some way for his individual benefit.

Political Economy

Acheson's Gamble

WHILE Congressmen snipe at our China policy, negotiations in Moscow between the Soviet government and the leaders of the new Chinese People's Republic may well change the balance of power in East Asia.

Dean Acheson's position is this: that Russia is detaching four large areas of China—Singiang, Inner and Outer Mongolia and Manchuria—and that this may well make impossible an alliance between the two Communist powers.

The greatest force in China today is not communism, but nationalism. There are certain concessions which Mao Tse-tung dare not make to the Kremlin. If Chinese and Russian interests come into conflict, this fact may alter the strategic picture, not merely in Asia, but in the whole world.

This is Acheson's gamble. Is it likely to pay off?

OUTER MONGOLIA has been independent since 1911. A quarter of a century ago the Russians set up a "Mongolian People's Government" there, which we recognized in the Yalta Agreement. Singiang, separated from the populous parts of China by more than a thousand miles, came under Russian influence in 1933. Inner Mongolia became a Japanese puppet state in 1934, and has been claimed for years by the Mongolian People's Republic as a part of Greater Mongolia.

None of these areas, properly speaking, is Chinese, in either allegiance, population or language. All, however, were at one time claimed by the old Manchu Empire, and Mao may well have expected the Russians to recognize them as part of his new Chinese People's Republic.

Manchuria is another story. These northeastern provinces were annexed by Japan in 1931 and built into the industrial state of Manchukuo. For 20 bitter years China's hopes have been centered on Manchuria. If now it should be lost to Mao's Communist allies this would be a disastrous blow to his prestige and to China's prospects for recovery.

Here for the first time the national ambitions of two major Communist powers are in conflict. That conflict is no less serious for being cloaked in Marxist-Leninist gobbledygook of purest strain.

STAKES, for both parties, are high.

Russia's first interest in Manchuria is strategic. In Japan and Korea the United States is on Asia's doorstep. The only invasion route through China is by way of Manchuria.

Under the Yalta Agreement Russia holds the naval base of Port Arthur, which is next door to Korea; the "free port" of Dairen—in practice free only to Russia; and joint control of the Chinese Changchun Railway. She is now reported to be asking for five other ports around the Shantung Peninsula to outflank American Korea and gain control of the Yellow Sea.

Her other interest in Manchuria is economic. This is East Asia's richest prize, with coal, iron, copper, molybdenum and oil shale; great stands of virgin timber; millions of acres of corn, wheat and soybeans. Its normal exports of soybeans alone would bring China more than 400 million dollars a year at present prices. This is the only part of China with export surpluses of food.

Japan built Manchukuo into an industrial empire. In 1945 Russia claimed whole plants as war booty, and moved them bodily to the Soviet Union. The next year she asked China (the Chiang government) for joint control of Manchuria's coal mines, power plants, and its iron, steel, chemical and cement industries.

THUS WERE China's hopes defrauded. The looting of Manchuria may have set China's recovery back 10 years.

This area will be the real test of Chinese-Russian relations. If Manchuria's surplus grains and manufactures are diverted toward Siberia, China will lack food for her cities, exports for trade, and capital for industrialization. If Manchuria is completely detached, the revulsion in China against Soviet Russia will be deep and bitter.

This is what Acheson is gambling on. It is by no means a desperate hope, but a real possibility.

GM Declares $1.50 Dividend For 1st Period

By S. Oliver Goodman

General Motors Corp., which has more than 5400 common stockholders in the District of Columbia, yesterday afternoon voted a $1.50 dividend for the first 1950 quarter.

The common dividend is payable March 10 to stock of record February 16.

In the first three quarters of 1949, the company paid dividends of $1.25 each. For the last quarter, a year-end dividend of $4.25 a share was disbursed, an all-time high for the company. At that time financial circles said it probably was a record amount for any corporation in the United States.

General Motors' earnings for 1949 have not yet been reported, but Alfred P. Sloan, jr., G.M. chairman recently estimated net at more than 600 million dollars. If this figure is attained, net would be equal to $13.30 a common share. This would compare with 440 million dollars or $9.72 a share for 1948.

The GM board yesterday also declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.25 on the $5 preferred stock and a 93¾-cent dividend on the $3.75 preferred. Both are payable May 1 to stock of record February 10. About 600 persons in the District of Columbia own GM preferred stock.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 6 (AP).—Grains showed weakness at the start and strength at the close today. Final prices recorded fair-sized gains over those of Saturday.

Commission House liquidation hit the market at the start, prices falling a couple of cents in some contracts. All-rye deliveries made new lows. Heavy turnover featured this initial drop, but volume dried up and the market began a creeping, timid advance.

In the last 15 minutes the bullish forces lost all their timidity, definitely putting the bear on the run. Prices rose quickly, particularly in the March contracts. Short-covering helped the advance.

Wheat ended 1¼-2⅜ higher, corn was ⅜-1⅝ higher, oats were ⅛-⅜ higher. Rye was ¼ to 1 cent higher, soybeans were ⅛ to 2 cents higher and lard was 3 to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Divorcee Loses Suit to Avoid Income Tax on Trust Fund

An aging New York woman lost a lawsuit here yesterday to escape Federal income tax on money paid her by her former husband in lieu of alimony.

She is Mrs. Jessica S. Mahana, former wife of George S. Hahana. According to the decision of the Court of Claims dismissing her action, she is now approximately 77 years old, and her former husband is two years older.

The Mahanas, according to the Court of Claims finding, were married in 1893. She began action against him for separate maintenance in 1923. As a result, he set up a trust for her which was to guarantee her $17,500 a year for life in lieu of alimony. By the agreement, she renounced any interest in his estate.

The Court of Claims opinion said that the time of the agreement, Mahana's income was $65,000 a year after all taxes, and that subsequently his income from employment alone was $100,000 a year.

In 1924, the Court of Claims said, Mrs. Mahana divorced her husband absolutely, and he later remarried and his second wife had a child.

An amended agreement was subsequently reached between Mahana and his first wife under which he increased the trust to care for certain Federal and New York income taxes. However, she began suit to recover Federal taxes levied against her income from the trust for the years 1943 to 1945, inclusive. She held that the income was in lieu of alimony and therefore not taxable.

But the Court of Claims found yesterday, in effect, that had the money been paid directly to her by Mahana from his income, it would have been taxable to him, first as income.

"In every day usage," the Court of Claims said, "the plaintiff, receiving large sums of money currently from a man who ceased to be her husband more than 20 years ago, would be regarded as having an income."

Sheaffer Votes Extra of $1.15

Fort Madison, Iowa, Feb. 6 (AP). W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co. today declared an extra quarterly dividend of $1.15 a share of common stock in addition to the regular payment of 10 cents a share. Both are payable February 25 to stockholders of record February 15.

The company said three previous dividends paid by the company amounted to 30, 30, and 40 cents, respectively, bringing the total for the fiscal year ending February 28 to $2.25. The previous fiscal year carried a total dividend disbursement of $1.50 a share.

On the basis of its old stock, split five-for-one in January, 1947, this year's payment would be $11.25 a share.

In addition, directors declared a profit-sharing distribution to its employes in the amount of 50 percent of the employes' earnings for the months of December, January and February, the largest payments since the plan started in 1934.

Delay in Video Decision Held Monopoly Aid

Clifton, N. J., Feb. 6 (AP).—Dr. Allen B. du Mont today said prolonged investigation of color television is threatening thousands of jobs and opening the door to monopoly.

Du Mont, a nationally known television pioneer, said that a year and a half ago the Federal Communications Commission put a "freeze" on the issue of permits for new television stations, in order to investigate the possible use of ultrahigh frequencies.

Instead of clearing the question up in a matter of months, Du Mont said, the commission "spends its time investigating the possibility of color television now," while the freeze continues and the television market remains limited.

Color television is 10 years away in the opinion of most experts, he said.

As a result, Du Mont said, plants that could be employing thousands have only skeleton crews of a few engineers.

He said there were 351 applicants who wanted to build new stations when the freeze went on.

"The big fellows can probably survive," Du Mont continued, "but the hundreds of little companies now in television are going to experience some very tough going. The long delay has opened the door to monopoly in both broadcasting and manufacturing."

Du Mont's remarks were made in a press statement. He said he would talk to New Jersey's congressional delegation about it Tuesday in Washington.

Du Mont is president of the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, which have several thousand employes in Passaic, East Paterson and Clifton, N. J. He said camera and transmitter manufacture is already at a standstill because of the freeze, and that it is "only a question of time" before makers of receiving sets are affected.

'Too Liberal'

Farm Group Hits House Cotton Bill

America's biggest farm organization, the American Farm Bureau Federation, yesterday came out against a House-approved cotton acreage bill as too liberal to cotton farmers.

Walter L. Randolph, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau, urged that additional acreage allowed for cotton growers be cut 50 percent.

The bill, which would permit from 1½ to 2½ million additional acres to be planted in cotton next year, was designed to take care of so-called "hardship" cases. Congress last year passed a bill that would reduce the Nation's cotton acreage from 27 million to around 21 million acres this year. Many complaints that the measure was unfair led to the new House bill.

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.), one of the authors of the original measure, had Randolph emphasize that "probably" 90 percent of the Nation's cotton growers "are not quarreling" about their allotments.

The same bill would also grant more liberal acreage allotments to peanut growers. Randolph recommended such action, speaking, he said, for himself but not for the national farm bureau. Under the Anderson bill, he said, Alabama peanut growers were cut 30 percent, Texas 28 percent, but nationally the cut only averaged 20 percent.

Representative Cecil F. White (D., Calif.) opposed any changes in the House bill. In fact, he said, the House bill was not liberal enough.

Storage Battery Concerns Named in Anti-Trust Charge

Attorney General McGrath yesterday announced a blanket indictment at Kansas City charging a criminal antitrust conspiracy in the sale and distribution of used storage batteries.

The Attorney General said the grand jury at Kansas City had named as defendants in the action 22 large concerns and 24 individuals, accused of an illegal combination in both the used storage battery business and the handling of lead salvaged from such batteries.

McGrath said that he also will request dissolution of the lead disposal company of Chicago, Ill.

McGrath described the Chicago company as "an administrative concern organized to effect a national program for disposal of used batteries." He asserted it had agreements with scrap concerns dividing the Nation into geographic areas "in which each such concern is to operate and among other things, providing for the payment of uniform prices for used batteries."

Those named in the indictment and suit include the association of American Battery Manufacturers headquarters at Akron, Ohio, some of the major battery manufacturers, and a group of large battery retailers, including Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward of Chicago, Western Auto Supply Co. of Kansas City, the Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone tire companies of Akron.

Those named as defendants in the criminal case include:

Scrap metal concerns:

Jacob I. Malschick, Inc., Philadelphia, and Barney Talansky, president, Southeast Lead Co., High Point, N. C.; Kansas Hide & Wool Co., Inc., Manhattan, Kan., and Jack Goldstein, president; Morris Cohen, doing business as M. Cohen & Co., Nashville, Tenn.; Benjamin Yaffee doing business as Yaffee Iron & Metal Co., Fort Smith, Ark.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

"George" doesn't do it for us!

Of all the forms of commercial transportation, only the railroads don't say, "let George do it."

Unlike their competitors...who have outgrown the "infant industry" stage, but who still rely on help from the people's tax dollars... America's self-supporting railroads pay all their own costs of doing business. And that is good news for "George."

For after all, who is this fellow "George" who is building and maintaining the highways, waterways and airways that other carriers use as a "place of business" for private gain? He is every taxpayer in America. "George" is...you!

But you don't do it for us, "George." The Southern Railway pays its own way...in the time-tested, traditional American way. It isn't easy...especially when we have to compete for business with subsidized carriers. But it's easier on you and your pocket-book, "George"! And it's better for our country, too. Because in the long run, private industries...like private citizens ...must be independently self-reliant if America's greatness is to endure.

Legislators Slice Income Tax Bills

Annapolis, Md. (AP).—Two measures to cut the State income tax bills of many Marylanders were approved by the House of Delegates tonight by unanimous vote.

They were sent along to the Senate, where administration leaders are prepared to press for quick passage and signature into law.

One would raise the exemption for each dependent of an income taxpayer from $400 to $600. It would mean a total savings of about $989,000 for approximately 186,000 persons.

The other would double the $1000 personal exemption of those 65 or over. It would cut an additional $70,000 from the State's revenues.

A bill moved in the Senate tonight would set up a commission on chronic alcoholism and appropriate $100,000 a year for the maintenance of clinics for alcoholics in various sections of Maryland.

More Data On Mental Illness Urged

Public awareness of the extent and seriousness of mental illness was demanded here yesterday by a group of psychiatrists, social workers and mental health officials from nine States.

They met at the Willard Hotel to discuss the Nation's needs in relation to Mental Health Week, April 23-29. The conference was called by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Miss Isabel Leighton of the board of directors announced that during Mental Health Week a program to inform the Nation of mental health needs will be carried on.

Cooperating will be the National Mental Health Foundation, the National Institute of Mental Health and the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, head of the department of psychiatry and director of the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital, stressed the need for additional psychiatric institutes.

An "enormous shortage" of trained personnel in psychiatry, psychology, social work and nursing was pictured by Dr. Francis J. Braceland, chief psychiatrist of the Mayo Clinic.

Battle School Bill Passed After Wrangle

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Governor Battle's proposal for 45 million dollars in direct aid for local school construction passed both Houses of the Virginia Legislature today.

Only formalities now remain before it becomes law.

Final action that headed the State into a new fiscal channel—granting State funds outright for local school construction—came with House approval of a conference committee report.

The President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House must sign the bill in the presence of both bodies—probably Tuesday—and then Governor Battle can make it law with his signature.

The House and Senate committee conference became necessary when the House rejected a number of Senate amendments. The Senate insisted on its amendments and a Senate-House conference approved the Senate changes virtually in toto.

In the final votes on the bill, only Senator Edward O. McCue, jr., of Albemarle, cast a dissenting vote in the Senate. In the House, there were 12 dissenting votes.

The House also passed:

The Bailey House bill requiring parked cars to dim their headlights.

The Davis House bill enabling the defendant to appeal from a trial justice court by putting up a cash deposit instead of a bond.

The Moncure House bill to provide that there can be no further trial in cases where a person has been indicted for a felony and two hung juries have resulted.

Play's a Classic —But Oh So Cute

By Richard L. Coe

MR. EISMAN, a gentleman friend who is interested in educating me, said: "Lorelei, I see where they are doing Mole Yare at Catholic University. He is a French playwright and while I am in Chicago I think you should go and see his play."

So, because I am always trying to improve my brains, I decided to do just that and to take Dorothy with me. Dorothy is a girl who does not show reverence for educating herself, but I thought because it was a French playwright and Dorothy had been in France it might be some help.

Well, it turned out Dorothy needn't have come at all because she has no reverence and anyway the French play was in English. You could understand every word which is too bad because every word was not worth understanding and there seemed to be a great many of them.

The play was called "The Would-Be Gentleman" and it was about a very funnily-dressed Frenchman who was trying to improve himself but was not very good at it. It took him a very long time to get anything done at all and when he did invite some people to his house it was hardly worthwhile because they were very dull people who were after his money and he didn't know what to do with them, although his wife did.

One girl was very bright because she knew that diamonds are a girl's best friend, even though the one her gentleman friend gave her was a little ring thing you could hardly see. Still, it showed that though this was a long time ago, Fate keeps on happening.

Mole Yare wrote this play in 1670 so it is a very old play and it looks it, even though the college boys behave like they do at inishiasuns and sometimes like Bobby Clark who is very funny when he is Bobby Clark but not so funny when he is not Bobby Clark.

The costumes looked very lovely in the dark but when the lights went on I knew that Madame Frances had not been called in because the colors clashed very untastefully although I myself like pink but I do know when I have had enough shades of pink.

Dorothy Meets a Critic

After the play was over Dorothy had met a cultivated young man who said he was a Critic and because Mr. Eisman is always encouraging me to meet people who can help me with culture, we accepted his invitation to go home.

So I asked this critic if he thought it was a very good show and he laughed and said that no, it was not because although it is a classic it was all too coy and cute and self-conscious and then he and Dorothy, who can be very unrefined, had some sort of a joke that must have been very unrefined because I know Dorothy.

Well, anyway, I can tell Mr. Eisman that I have seen his Mole Yare, but I am not sure that I will tell him it depressed me so much I had to have some champagne to cheer me up.

Sensitive Style Happy Factor In Miss Bloecher's Singing

By Paul Hume

Charlotte Bloecher's singing shows marked improvement over her last appearance here.

The young soprano sang last night in the Phillips Gallery. Assisted by her sister, Olga Bloecher, flutist, the singer presented two arias by Bach. With piano alone, she listed a remarkable selection of Mozart, Schubert, Wolf, and contemporary composers.

Her voice is more evenly produced throughout its wide range and she has increased its power. Constant evidence of musicianship and sensitive style in songs is a happy factor in Miss Bloecher's work. She was at her best in songs of Wolf. Her diction relaxed from a strained quality which marked most of the first half of the recital.

This strain marred Schubert's Musensohn greatly though it was not noticeable in Der Fluss which was handled with delicacy. The voice sounds best in quiet moments. In full voice and at the top of the range there is a tense quality of tone, due partly to frequent movement of the lower law. Steady practice in breathing and greater relaxation will add color and life to the tone. The program was musically rewarding at all times.

Sunday afternoon the National Symphony Orchestra gave an important Washington premiere.

Playing in the gymnasium of Catholic University, the orchestra, under Howard Mitchell, gave Claude Debussy's The Blessed Damozel, with Katharine Hansel and Rilla Rowe Mervine as soloists. The women's chorus of the university, trained by the Rev. Russell Woollen, sang the choral passages.

It is our first hearing of Mitchell in a large orchestral score of Debussy. We must say it proved to be one of the most perfect and most beautiful performances of any music we have heard from his players.

The sound of the instruments was of dazzling beauty. The sensitive lines glowed in effulgent beauty. The chorus sang with assurance and marked awareness of their part. Both soloists were unusually well cast, with amazing sense of the flowing lines.

Rilla Mervine was truly sumptuous in her opening statements. Mrs. Hansel's voice, though a little light in the lowest range, carried through the orchestra with ease.

Big Mo 'Exec' Twice Asked New Course

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 6 (U.P.)—The executive officer of the USS Missouri told a naval court of inquiry today he recommended twice that the battleship change course when he realized the ship was in danger just before running aground January 17.

The operations officer said there was question on the bridge as to buoy markings on her course and as to her speed.

A four-member board under Rear Admiral Milton E. Miles seeks to place responsibility for the Big Mo's 15-day stay on a Hampton Roads mudbank.

Meanwhile, the Navy said the Mighty Mo will be floated out of drydock Tuesday. Capt. William D. Brown, who was taking the Missouri out for the first time as skipper when she ran aground, will be in command again if his health permits. He has been under a doctor's care for two days.

Navy sources said if the inquiry is not complete by the time the Big Mo is ready for sea "Thursday or Friday," it will be continued aboard the ship.

10-Minute Notice

The executive officer, Comdr. George E. Peckham of Cresco, Iowa, said he had only 10 minutes' notice that the Big Mo was going to run a secret acoustic range at the entrance to Hampton Roads.

He learned it, he said, from the navigator, Lieut. Comdr. George E. Morris jr., of New York. He said the track plotted on Morris' charts looked safe.

But Peckham said he saw a buoy ahead, marked on the charts as the left limit of the safe channel. He sent down a recommendation that the ship go back and "twist right."

A few minutes later, he said, he saw that the Mo had changed course and was headed to the left of the buoy instead of of the right.

He sent a second recommendation on the "squawk box" that the Big Mo be put into reverse at full speed.

He got no acknowledgment, he said. By that time, the engine room had reported trouble.

The operations officer, Commander John Raymond Millett, said he had not been certain of the number of buoys marking the acoustic range— a secret listening device under the surface to the left of the regular channel.

Only two buoys marked the range, he said, but the charts used in plotting the Big Mo's course showed five buoys.

Two of the buoys were marked in heavy pencil. The charts introduced in evidence today showed three other buoys marked in lighter pencil and on one chart they appeared to have been erased.

Another Penguin

Zoo Penguin Gets Early Valentine

Scarlet ibis in latest pose

It's just possible there's a new romance starting to smoulder at the Zoo.

But there's a matter of time and (ahem) sex involved.

A Humboldt penguin is one of the new arrivals at the Zoo. The Zoo has had another Humboldt penguin for about nine years. The two have been together.

Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, says as far as he's concerned you can't tell the sex of a penguin until it lays an egg. That makes it a momma.

For productivity's sake, he's hoping that one ise a boy penguin and one is a girl penguin.

"They seem to be hitting it off pretty well together," Dr. Mann observed hopefully.

Other Good News

And there was other good news at the Zoo yesterday. Three scarlet ibis and a scarlet tanger had checked in as new residents, and the hybrid bear cub, a genetics miracle, was still alive after a month and three days.

The scarlet ibis is related to the sacred ibis of Egypt.

But where the sacred ibis has white plumage with black tail and head, the scarlet ibis is flaming red.

The scarlet decor is broken only by yellow beaks. They are about the size of a small chicken, but with longer legs and beak.

The Zoo has had one scarlet ibis for about 30 years, but over the decades its flaming plumage has faded to a pale scarlet.

Five of Litter Died

The bear cub was one of a litter of six born to hybrid bear parents. Five of the litter died.

It was a scientific wonder that the litter was born. It is even more of a wonder, says Dr. Mann, that one has survived this long.

The cub's eyes are not yet open. It is being fed by bottle. Dr. Mann said that each day adds to the cub's chances of surviving.

The cub was shown to the public in the small mammal house Saturday and Sunday. About 35,000 persons viewed the tiny cub Sunday.

Court Order Continued On Pressmen's Union

Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court yesterday continued for 10 days a temporary restraining order prohibiting the AFL Pressmen's Union from ousting Washington Local No. 1. The parent union moved to oust the local after the latter demanded a probe into the estate of the late George Berry, the international's president, according to court papers.

Dentists Discuss Oral Habits

Thumb sucking is normal for an infant, but abnormal for a 6-year-old, Dr. Maury Massler told the District Dental Society last night.

Dr. Massler, professor of graduate pedodontics at the University of Illinois College of Dentistry, said thumb sucking in the school-age child is a sign the child is emotionally disturbed and attempting to become an infant again.

Thumb sucking in the older child also may lead to dental deformities which require treatment by the dentist and doctor, he said.

Similarly, nail-biting by a school-age child is normal, but in the 30-year-old it is an abnormality, Dr. Massler said.

Human beings, he said, are born with oral habits, the first of which is sucking. As the child grows older, he progresses from thumb sucking to nail biting, later to gum chewing and as an adult to lip-biting, smoking or to cigar chewing.

Other participants in the National Children's Dental Health Day discussion, held in the Medical Society Auditorium, 1718 M st. nw., were Dr. Reginald S. Lourie, director of the department of psychiatry at Children's Hospital, and Dr. George Maksim, chairman of the section of pediatrics of the District of Columbia Medical Society.

They will discuss the new sex-crime law, the current sex-crime situation in Washington and citizen responsibility.

Dr. William P. Herbst, society president, will preside at the luncheon, scheduled for 12:15 p. m., in Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw.

Art Valpey Quits Harvard to Coach at Connecticut

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

IT IS NOW proposed that the major leagues re-arrange the division of their gate receipts on a 60-40 basis to give the visiting clubs a better split of the swag, but if the idea gets to first base somebody ought to be charged with a muff.

Right now the visiting teams are dragging down about 28 cents per general admission in the American League, two bits flat in the National. The proposal to up their take to 40 cents, made by an unidentified but obviously a second-division club owner, is being defended on a couple of counts.

POVICH

He says that the less wealthy teams, with their bigger percentage of the gate receipts in the big-drawing towns, would be in a better position to bid for the higher-salaried stars and thus bring better-balanced races to the league. He argues that it would offset the concentration of wealth in the bigger cities and revive fan-interest all over the league.

He pegs his argument to the claim that there are clubs in the league which couldn't afford to pay such as Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams the $100,000 salaries they draw, and thus are under continual handicap.

IF SUCH as the Yankees and Indians, who draw crowds of 70,000 to their big ball parks, recoil at the prospect of dealing off 40 cents per admission to such as the Browns, Nats and White Sox, it is understandable. That's too much money to be given away to teams without drawing power of their own, and would make for a league of parasites sponging on the clubs with enterprise.

Splitting the dough in any such amount with the second-division clubs would only aggravate the situation anyway. It would place before the less enterprising teams the high temptation to continue their do-nothing habits and sponge contentedly on the big gates of the successful teams. Instead of stimulating the pennant races, it would have the opposite effect.

It isn't necessarily the big population centers that draw the biggest crowds. Cleveland, only the fifth largest city in the American League, set a home attendance record of 2,600,000 for the American League in 1948. It was done by smart promotion and the willingness to risk some capital in big salaries and expensive purchases. The Indians got it all back and more by giving Clevelanders an exciting ball team.

ANY 60-40 split for the visiting clubs without drawing power of their own would be far out of whack and undeserved. The Browns, for example, who pay no part of DiMaggio's $100,000 salary, would virtually have him on their payroll nevertheless—at least he'd be working for them at the gate in a measure only a bit smaller than the Yankees do.

It's a fallacy, anyway, that the poorer clubs can't afford to pay the salaries of such as DiMaggio and Williams. Any enterprising club would be happy to have them both on its payroll, plus Bob Feller at $45,000 a year, and gamble on its chances of being able to pay them off. They'd wind up with a money-making ball team, in contrast.

Virtually every club that goes into St. Louis, where the Browns drew only 270,000 admissions for the 1949 season, takes a loss. On certain trips, they don't get away with hotel and laundry expenses. Raising the visiting club's share to 40 percent in St. Louis wouldn't mean tipping money. When our clubowner friend who wants a new 60-40 split makes the proposal, he isn't asking, he's begging.

THE GREATER boon to a better-balanced pennant race would be to let all of the clubs keep 100 percent of their home receipts. They'd stand or fall by their ability to put in the race a good ball team, unsubsidized by the lush receipts their poor clubs draw on the road from teams that maintain big scouting staffs, farm systems and promotion departments.

Such an arrangement would root the laggards out of the big leagues, or at least put them on their own. Their only recourse would be to give their home fans better baseball, which seems to be a fair demand. Making it easy for them to fatten off the successful clubs wouldn't improve anything except their balance sheets.

Anyway, the bigger cities aren't always the best-drawing towns. A first-division team could quickly take such as the Nats and Browns out of the red, and a couple in a row would give the club-owners funds with which to bid successfully for the better talent. No town in the majors is a poor baseball town—only the brand of baseball is poor.

First Change in 31 Years

Ronzani Succeeds Lambeau As Coach of Green Bay Team

Green Bay, Wis., Feb. 6 (AP).—The first new coach in 31 years signed a three-year contract today with the Green Bay Packers.

He's Gene (Tuffy) Ronzani, one-time Marquette University and Chicago Bears backfield star, who replaces Earl L. (Curly) Lambeau, the only coach the Packers ever had until his resignation six days ago to become vice president and head coach of the Chicago Cardinals.

Ronzani's salary was not announced, but was reported to be between $10,000 and $15,000. Lambeau was getting $25,000 as head coach, vice president and general manager.

Emil R. Fischer, Packer president, said Ronzani would handle the Packer voting at all future National-American Football League meetings, but that a business manager would be chosen later.

Ronzani has been quarterback coach of the Bears for three years and in the Bears' organization since 193, when he was graduated as a nine letterman from Marquette. His only previous head coaching experience was with Bears' farm teams at Newark, N. J., and Akron, Ohio. He is a native of Iron Mountain, Mich.

Conn Flunks Test, Hoyas Can Lose Him

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The collegiate football career of Billy Conn, Georgetown University's top breakaway runner, is "in danger."

That was the term employed yesterday by the Rev. Edward Jacklin, S. J., Georgetown dean, regarding Conn's scholastic standing.

Conn, a junior, failed a midterm English examination and a decision, expected in a day or two, will determine whether or not he may remain at Georgetown.

Father Jacklin explained that a committee will review all midterm failures individually and its findings should be announced either today or tomorow. Other athletes are said to be affected.

Loss Would Hurt Chances

Conn already is a probationary student—he had to attend summer school last year to make up a subject. There's a chance he may still be given another opportunity.

Loss of the Newark, N. J., speedster would be a serious blow to next season's Hoya football squad. Billy, Georgetown's most publicized football player, also has been its most proficient ground-gainer.

Next fall's plans include Conn and Bob (Bugs) Thompson in the same backfield. Thompson, former All-High star at McKinley Tech here, quit Clemson and enrolled at Georgetown last fall. He will be eligible to play for the Hoyas next season.

They would form as fine a combination of running backs as there is in the East.

Good From the Start

Conn was widely heralded as a sophomore at Georgetown and immediately made his advance notices ring true. He streaked for a 75-yard touchdown run against Boston College. Billy also zigzagged through the entire Fordham team for a 102-yard run to the goalline that was nullified by a penalty.

At the beginning of last season, Conn was in the headlines again. He suffered from a penetrating duodenal ulcer and there was doubt that he would be able to play.

But when the bell rang, Conn was on hand. He scored two of Georgetown's three touchdowns in its opening upset victory over Holy Cross, one on a 23-yard run.

He also went for a 23-yard touchdown run against NYU and beat Wake Forest by throwing a touchdown pass in the last minute. In that one, Wake Forest was a three-touchdown favorite. Billy also picked up a valuable skill, catching passes.

Conn wound up a highly successful season, for an "invalid," by going 68 yards for Georgetown's only score against George Washington University.

Clayton Beats Tom Sheppard

After a slow start, Marshall Clayton came on to keep his pro record unsullied, turning back Baltimore's Tommy Sheppard in an 8-round cofeature at Turner's Arena last night.

In the other 8-rounder, Stocky Stonewall Jackson, 146, a 7-to-5 underdog, upset Leon Daughtry, 148 by a unanimous decision.

Referee Ray Bowen and the two judges also agreed that Clayton scored his eighth victory in nine starts. His other was a draw.

Clayton, giving up 4 pounds at 137, ended up wearing out his heavier opponent.

There wasn't the semblance of a knockdown in the so-called features. 'Blood flower more freely earlier in the evening.

Red Hickerson, 141½, started proceedings by scoring a technical knockout over Bobby Busick, 139, in the third round of a scheduled four.

In the other fours, Rufus Berry, 173½, won a TKO over Kid Wolf, 171, at 2:05 in the fourth after cutting his eye badly; Henry Scott, 152½, decisioned southpaw George Carrigan, 158, Baltimore.

Ralph Brown, 148½, was held to a draw by Jimmy O'Brien, 152, Baltimore.

Art Fletcher Dies

Los Angeles, Feb. 6 (AP).—Art Fletcher, 65, third base coach of the New York Yankees during the Babe Ruth-Lou Gehrig era, fell dead on the street here tonight. Doctors at Emergency Hospital said he suffered a heart attack.

FIVE OF ORIGINAL CAPS—These five players remain of the squad that originally launched big league professional basketball as the Washington Caps in the 1946-47 season. They attended a luncheon in honor of Bones McKinney (center, seated) yesterday at the Touchdown Club. Seated, left to right: Coach Bob Feerick, McKinney and John Norlander. Standing, Buddy O'Grady and Fred Scolari. The Caps' next home game is Saturday with the Anderson Packers

Has Enough Money

Leahy Says He Rejected Million Dollar Coaching Job

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The New York Journal American quoted Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame today as saying he had turned down a one-million-dollar coaching contract. The offer was for $100,000 a year for 10 years.

Leahy did not say when he received the bid, nor identify the professional club which presumably made it.

Leahy told Lewis Burton of the Journal-American he had been so fortunate financially that money no longer plays a part in his choice of a coaching job.

"My last coaching job will be at Notre Dame," he was quoted by Burton. "It would be anticlimax to coach anywhere else.

"I've reached such a fortunate position in my affairs that right now I'd gladly pay Notre Dame what they're paying me for the privilege of coaching there.

"I get $15,000 a year—not $16,000, because the past few years I've been receiving a $1000 bonus at the end of the season. I'd gladly pay that much for the pleasure and honor."

Calvert Is the Bait

Nats Haven't Landed Trout Yet—They're Still Fishing

Manager Red Rolfe of the Detroit Tigers may make a decision today that would put Pitcher Paul (Dizzy) Trout into a Washington uniform in a swap for Pitcher Paul Calvert.

The deal, proposed three weeks ago by the Washington Club, is in Rolfe's lap since being approved by General Manager Billy Evans of the Tigers. Rolfe is vacationing in Clearwater, Fla., and Evans will communicate with him today.

Trout, huge right-hander who will be 35 years old in June, won only three games, lost six for Detroit last season. He griped at being used chiefly in relief roles and Rolfe weeks ago labeled him as trading material.

Calvert, bespectacled like Trout and also a right-hander, won 6, lost 17 after being signed as a free agent out of the Mexican League by the Nats last spring. After a sensational start with his sinker ball, Calvert was troubled by a continually blistered finger on his pitching hand.

Originally, the Tigers held out for "something more" than Calvert in a Trout swap. But Evans agreed to the deal conditioned on Rolfe's approval.

Manager Bucky Harris declared yesterday he would satisfy Trout's ambitions to be a starting pitcher if a deal were made. In contrast, the Tigers are viewing Calvert as a relief man to offset that weakness in their otherwise well-rounded staff.

Back in December, the Nats were offered Trout in a straight swap for Outfielder Gil Coan but rejected that proposition made by Evans.

Vice President Calvin Griffith of the Nats declared the Calvert-Trout deal is "only one of the propositions we have working." He indicated that even that deal might be expanded into a swap involving other players.

It is known that the Tigers are eager to obtain First Baseman Eddie Robinson of the Nats. As a lure they are offering Dick Kryhoski, the first baseman obtained from the Yankees in the swap for Dick Wakefield. The Washington club has made it clear it would trade Robinson for Kryhoski and "other players" including a "solid" pitcher.

Even VMI Downs Terps

Lexington, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Virginia Military Institute basketball team recorded its third victory of the season and chalked up its second Southern Conference win here tonight by downing the University of Maryland, 62-61.

It was the third win in five starts for the Keydets, who seem to have found themselves after a slow start this season.

Skip Nay, VMI's sharp-shooting forward, again paced the Keydet five to victory, scoring 29 points to take high point honors.

American Wins 5th in Row, 79-62

American University's basketball team started to coast too soon last night and had a second half scare before it finally subdued Bucknell University, 79-62, in the A. U. gym.

The victory was the fifth straight for the Eagles, their longest winning streak in three seasons, and it gave them a record of 13 victories against 6 defeats. The defeat was the eighth against three victories for Bucknell.

With Bob Lamon clicking on some phenomenal shooting the Eagles spurted to a 24-9 lead in the first half before the subs took over.

Bucknell started the all-court press at the outset of the second half and caught the Eagles napping for a few minutes. With the alert Joe Gallagher, Roger Rogers and Don Strassner scoring consistently, the Bisons drove until they were within six points at 53-47.

Here Art Morales took over for American U and within 90 seconds scored three times to put the Eagles safely ahead.

Lewis Coaches West Virginia

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Art Lewis, line coach at Mississippi State College, was named tonight as the new head football coach at West Virginia University.

Lewis succeeds Dudley Degroot who quit January 27.

University President Irvin Stewart said Lewis' appointment had been made effective March 1, and the new coach is expected to report at Morgantown within the next two weeks.

His salary was not announced. Degroot was paid $12,000 a year.

There had been no less than 25 applicants for the post which Degroot vacated to become head coach at the University of Mexico.

Lewis, a resident of Parkersburg, W. Va., was head coach at Washington and Lee Universtiy for three years prior to going to Mississippi State last year. At that time Arthur M. (Slick) Morton left VMI to become head coach at Mississippi State.

Pep Scores Two Knockdowns, Beats Andrews

The stylish Hartford veteran first dropped Andrews for a nine count with a straight left to the face early in the second session. And just as that round closed, Pep following two lefts and a right with a bone-crushing right uppercut that made Andrews topple over backward.

Andrews was in total darkness but the bell sounded as the count reached nine and, as a result, the Lowell youngster was permitted to answer for the third round.

South Carolina No Match for GW, 71 to 46

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—George Washington swamped South Carolina, 71-46, here tonight

The bigger, speedier George Washington quintet swept far ahead at the start of the second half with fast-breaking scoring plays.

South Carolina was never able to recover, although it made a brief comeback midway the second stanza.

The visitors scored at will in the final few minutes in racking up their ninth Southern Conference victory against three defeats.

Forwards Arthur Cerra and John Moffatt paced George Washington's fast game, with Guard Phil McNiff breaking the South Carolinians' backs with perfect set shots from far out.

South Carolina held its own on the floor game in the first half, trailed 32-16 as the half ended, and looked as though it would make a game of it.

Moffatt, McNiff, Center Ray Adler and Moffatt again, dropped in fast-breaking quickies immediately after the half to sew up the game.

He Takes Cut In Salary to Make Change

By Lou Black

Storrs, Conn., Feb. 6 (AP).—Arthur L. Valpey today was named the University of Connecticut's new head football coach, effective March 1. He had served in a similar capacity at Harvard the past two seasons.

Official announcement of Valpey's appointment, made this afternoon by President Albert N. Jorgensen, came amid confusion. The plans were to keep it hush-hush until noon tomorrow, and an original press release carried that stipulation. Signals apparently were changed after two Connecticut newspapers today said Valpey was "in."

Valpey, in a press interview in the office of Athletic Director J. Orlean Christian, said he was "elated over getting the job."

"I'm glad," he declared, "to be back in a co-educational school, since my wife and I were both brought up in that atmosphere."

He declined to discuss salary, but those familiar with operations here estimated it at about $6000. That's much less than he is believed to have labored for at Harvard. All that Valpey did say was "the salary arrangements are mutually satisfactory."

The 33-year-old Valpey succeeds Christian, who was football boss here for 15 years until January 1 when he was relieved of the gridiron assignment to concentrate on athletic directorship.

President Jorgensen said Valpey's selection met with "almost unanimous approval of the committee."

Valpey, who still had one more season to go in a three-year contract with Harvard, stressed that he was "free to negotiate for a new job. If I wished, I could have stayed at Harvard next season."

In 1948, Valpey's first year at Harvard, his Crimson eleven won four of eight. Last season the Cambridge lads won only one of nine, the worst season in Harvard's football history. Close observers said Valpey was plagued by injuries to key men and lack of material.

Harvard's 1950 prospects aren't much brighter. The University of Connecticut, on the other hand, has been attracting promising material by leaps and bounds in recent years, and the future is optimistic.

His decision to leave the venerable ivy school for the less pretentious environs of a State university was reported to have been received as a blow to Harvard prestige. Hardly anybody here felt sad about that, however.

Harvard's 'Traditional Policy' Remains Same

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 6 (AP). The Harvard Corporation, the huge university's governing board, tonight announced it has received a report of the Crimson's sorry football situation.

The announcement was made shortly after Art Valpey, Harvard head football coach for the past two seasons, was named for a similar berth at the University of Connecticut.

"The provost (Paul H. Buck) has rendered a report on the football situation," the corporation stated. "The subject is being studied by the corporation and until such time as the corporation may determine otherwise, there will be no change in Harvard's traditional policy."

Severin Coaches Randolph-Macon

Ashland, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Randolf - Macon College tonight named Paul Severin, two-time All-American end at the University of North Carolina, as its new head football coach.

A member of the University of Florida coaching staff since 1946, Severin was an All-America end in 1939 and 1940.

Across The Nation: Two-Minute Rule Voted Out For N. Y. Invitation Tournament

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Collegiate basketball's controversial two-minute rule will be abandoned for the National Invitation Tournament, Asa S. Bushnell, tournament chairman, announced today.

"Throughout the entire game all foul shots must be attempted, and none may be waived," said Bushnell.

"During the final two minutes of the second half, and of each overtime period, after every single foul shot, whether made or missed—and after the second of every pair of foul shots, whether made or missed—the ball shall be put in play by a jump, at the nearer full circle, between opposing players designated by the respective team captains."

Boxer Baked to Lovely Brown, Then Wins Fight

Hickleton Main, England, Feb. 6 (AP).—Amateur boxer Bert Smith showed up 2 pounds overweight for a flyweight (112 pound) fight.

His pals popped him into a baking oven.

"He's browning lovely," they reported as they watched through a glass door. After 90 minutes they called him "done."

He made the weight exactly and won his fight.

32 Straight Ringers For Horseshoe Expert

ELGIN, ILL., Feb. 6 (AP). Frank Breen, 35, pitched a perfect game in horseshoes last night and claimed a world's amateur record.

Breen, chairman of the Central Association AAU horseshoe committee, threw 32 straight ringers in 32 shoes, or 16 straight double ringers. He tossed them in an indoor match with Arthur Weir of Elgin.

80-Year-Old Golfer Shoots 82 on Birthday

Walton Heath, England, Feb. 6 (AP).—Old Jimmy Braid, who's been playing golf for 65 years, prides himself on being able to beat his age.

But on his annual birthday round today he missed by two strokes. Braid was 80 years old. In a raw biting wind it took him 82 strokes to cover the Walton Heath course where he's been the club professional since 1904. Last week in good weather he shot a 73. In midsummer the course plays to an American par of 71.

The battle started after the Grottaglie team defeated the Carosino team. Carosino supporters invaded the field and stoned the Grottaglie players and rooters, one of who retaliated with pistol fire.

Rowing Group Needs Regatta Ante Boosted

Poughkeepsie, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Intercollegiate Rowing Association has asked the City of Poughkeepsie to ante up an additional $4000 over last year's guarantee if it wishes the national championships to be rowed here next summer, Mayor Horace S. Graham said today.

Last year Poughkeepsie put up $6000. The alternative, he said, would be "abandonment of the IRA's regatta or its removal to some other community.

Sweden's Eriksson Ski Titlist

Rumford, Me., Feb. 6 (AP).—Gunnar Eriksson, never a champion in his native Sweden, became the world ski marathon titleholder today.

The dark-haired Swede, who stopped six times for a drink of warm water and honey, raced through the 50 kilometers (31 miles) in an unofficial time of 2 hours 59 minutes and 5 seconds as he and his countrymen swept the first four places.

In eight years of trying prior to today the best Eriksson ever had done in the 50 kilometer was a second. But he had finished third in the 1948 Olympic 18-kilometer (11-mile race) and also had helped Sweden win the Olympic relay.

Through the first 12 kilometers (approximately 8 miles) he skied along in sixth place. He held that position through the entire first trip over the course, but by the time the three-quarter mark was reached he had zoomed into second place behind Harold Maartman of Norway, the leader by a minute and two seconds.

Maartman skidded to fifth at the finish, behind the Swedish foursome.

Thirty of the world's best ski marathoners started the race but only 25 finished. The United States team took the last five places with Olavi Alakuppi, formerly of the Finnish Army but now of Uncle Sam's forces, setting the pace.

Dart By Loses By Neck in Fast Finish

Miami, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—Pene L. Grissom's Sun Herod, running to his best form, set a new track record on the turf course as he led from end to end in the featured Nautilus purse today.

The 8-year-old gelding showed a distinct liking for the grass and clipped a full second from the former mark set by Bel Reigh in 1946.

The teletimer on the infield board went amiss and showed Sun Herod's time as 1:54 1/5 for the mile and a furlong. But this was corrected later when private timers detected the error. His time was 1:50 2/5.

Ridden by H. Manifold, Sun Herod went away flying into the first turn, withstood repeated stiff opposition from Brookmeade Stable's Dart By and finally outgamed that horse by a neck in a sensational finish.

William G. Helis' British Isles was a fast-closing third, another length and a half back, while E. E. Voynow's Stud Poker wound up fourth before six others.

Sun Herod paid $13.70 straight and by winning qualified for Saturday's $25,000 McLennan Handicap. Dart By, Stud Poker and the South American invader, Sallequilo, which was eighth today, are also candidates for the McLennan.

Fish Aid Bill Gets Backing

By Ralph Murdock

FISH AND GAME administrators of 13 Northeastern States have gone on record as favoring passage of the so-called Dingell bill which would earmark income from the 10 percent tax on sport fishing tackle. The annual income, estimated at $3,500,000, would be set aside specifically for Federal aid to the States undertaking sport fishing restoration programs.

Murdock

The bill has been introduced into Congress by Representative John D. Dingell, Democrat of Michigan. At present, the tax on sport fishing gear goes into general funds.

The action was taken at the business session of the Northeast section of the Wildlife Society and the Northeast Association of Game and Fish Administrators which was just concluded at a three-day convention in Syracuse, N. Y.

Delegates were warned away from stocking imported cotton tails to provide rabbit hunting. Joseph Dell, game investigator of the New York State Conservation Department, said the return does not justify the expense.

Saul B. Salia of Cornell University's Conservation Department told the group that "the potentialities of farm ponds for fish production have been overemphasized."

Norman G. Wilder of Dover, Del., was elected president of the Wildlife Society. He is director of conservation of the Delaware Board of Game and Fish Commissioners.

Elwood A. Seaman of Charles Town, W. Va., chief of the division of fish management was elected vice president; Philip Burke of Bridgeport, Conn., was reelected secretary-treasurer.

YOUNGSTERS in grades 5 through and including grade 12 in schools throughout the Commonwealth of Virginia are stepping up their efforts to write a winning essay in the third annual Wildlife essay contest which closes on February 28.

The contest is sponsored by the Game Commission and the Virginia Division of the Isaak Walton League of America. The individual cash prizes amount to $960. An additional $40 goes to the school having the most entrants in proportion to enrollment.

JUST ABOUT everything which will fit on the end of a fish hook has been tried to entice the striped bass to hit. Here's a brand new wrinkle. Buddy Clayton at Indian Landing on the Severn River comes up with this one.

He claims that a live bull minnow attached to a small bucktail will do the trick. He caught several 3 pounders as further evidence on Friday.

REPORTS emanating from the South River reveal that catches of white perch are being taken by the haul seiners in that area. It's rather unusual for the early appearance of this species but a lot of funny things are happening in fish life. We can only blame it on the unseasonable weather.

West Virginia has just established its 1950 fishing seasons, with the trout season opening on April 29.

D. C. Committee Bills Block FEPC Action

When the roll is called up yonder at the Capitol, the House District Committee will be there with bills on the calendar to get in the way of FEPC legislation.

This was assured yesterday by District Committee leaders. FEPC legislation, blocked in the House Rules Committee, has been "waiting in line" to be called up on a House "calendar Wednesday." Two committees—Civil Service and District—are ahead in line over the Education Committee, whose chairman, John Lesinski (D., Mich.) is awaiting the nod of Speaker Rayburn to call up the FEPC bill.

Civil Service gets the nod Wednesday; yesterday's work made sure the District Committee will have some legislation to talk about the following Wednesday, with FEPC put off until the week after.

The District Committee in a morning meeting skirted the edge of the FEPC fight without an actual mention of it. Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) asked for committee authority to have Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) call up a little bill he wrote for action a week from Wednesday.

Representative Miller later made it clear he wanted no part of such a move. He'd like to see the bill passed next Monday, the regular House District day, and feels it should not be used as a "club to head off FEPC." The bill would make American citizenship a prerequisite for obtaining a District license to practice the healing arts.

McMillan's request, promptly indorsed by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) ran into a block when Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah) said that if it was planned to throw the bill into the calendar Wednesday proceedings, he would make the point that no quorum of the District Committee was present. Eleven members were there, two short of a quorum.

Asked Special Action

McMillan said he was not thinking of the FEPC bill when he asked special action on the doctors bill. He said his only thought was that since the doctors bill had been held up two or three times, an effort should be made to obtain action if the District Committee is going to have a Wednesday for legislation.

He predicted there might be "a good bit of argument" about the doctors bill.

The committee also approved a bill to incorporate the Girl Scouts of America. Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge head the list of incorporators named in the bill. McMillan indicated both bills may be carried over to Wednesday of next week.

Chairman McMillan also discussed with the committee proposals to give the District daylight saving time, another year of rent control, and a law to preserve historic Georgetown buildings, but these were held over for hearings.

Patent Office Must Accept Application

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday ruled that the United States Patent Office cannot refuse an application for a patent filed by a former Patent Office employe two days after his resignation became effective.

The Appellate Court opinion affirms the ruling handed down last December by District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm.

The Patent Office had refused to accept an application from Benjamin Fox, now employed by the Signal Corps Radar Laboratory, Belmar, N. J., for a patent on an electrical altitude measuring device.

Fox was an assistant examiner at the Patent Office here until June 28, 1942, when his resignation became effective. Records show he filed his application on June 30, 1942.

House Votes More Pay For Rural Mail Men

The House voted yesterday to increase the compensation of rural mail carriers about $4,579,000 annually.

This would be done by allowing rural carriers to count their service before July 1, 1945, toward meritorious grade promotions.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

tering: "How can things get so tough?"

Mickey estimated the loss at $50,000, much of it to his expensive wardrobe. A dressing room adjoining the bedroom took the brunt of the blast, which police experts said came from at least 50 sticks of dynamite.

A corner of the house was ripped out, exposing what was left of the gambler's costly clothing collection to a prying crowd of thousands.

But no one was hurt. Not only the 36-year-old Cohen but his wife, Lavonne, and a maid, Kathryn Jones, were only shaken.

term, and John H. Daniel, of Charlotte, a memer since 1944.

Boothe, member of a prominent Alexandria family, is serving his second term. He predicted to a reporter that both bills "have a good chance in the House" if they emerge from committee successfully.

He explained each measure in considerable detail before the lower chamber.

School Buses Exempt

Repeal of segregation laws on public transportation would not deprive local governments of power to continue segregation by ordinance, he said, nor would it alter laws or police powers on disorderly conduct. School buses and private carriers would not be involved.

"It is our belief that its passage will lift a burden of humiliation from the shoulders of one fifth of our citizens," he said.

He said that most members of the House, being "States' rights men," feel that the Federal executive and legislative branches "have wrongfully injected themselves into many fields of life rightfully the domain of State action."

Says Negroes Slighted

But in the last 50 years, except for Senator Harry F. Byrd's "magnificent anti-lynch law in 1928" (when he was Governor), the General Assembly "has not enacted a single bill conferring upon the Negro any one of many attributes of Virginia citizenship which we possess and which he does not possess," he added.

The race relations commission would be a nine-member body appointed by the Governor. One would be from the House of Delegates, two from the Senate and the remainder at large from the State.

It would "consider economic, educational and other problems affecting our relations in the Commonwealth."

The commission would have authority to obtain factual information from State agencies, receive $10 per diem for expenses while meeting and report by September 1 of each year preceding the biennial session of the General Assembly. A first year appropriation of $1000 is proposed.

1st Degree Murder Charge Reduced; Man Pleads Guilty

Clarence B. Reynolds, 44, of 2804 Myrtle ave. ne., was permitted yesterday in District Court to plead guilty to manslaughter in the fatal shooting last August of A. Vance Bowling, 45, of 1938 3d st. ne.

Reynolds was originally charged with first-degree murder in the case, but the lesser charge was allowed after the prosecution announced that the defendant had been drinking heavily at the time of the slaying.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff continued the case pending a presentence investigation.

Store Thieves Get $380 in Alexandria

Burglars took $380 from the Princess Food Market, 330 N. Royal st., Alexandria, Sunday night, police reported yesterday.

Store Manager Jack Melnick, police said, left the store about 7 p. m. Sunday. When he returned shortly after 10 p. m., they said, he found the cash register open. A cash bag containing $380 that had been placed on a shelf beneath it was missing, they reported. Entrance to the store was gained by scaling a wire fence in the rear and ripping the bars on the kitchen window with a bolt cutter, police said.

Mrs. Uline Gets Weekly Settlement

Migiel J. (Mike) Uline, 75, iceman and sports producer, agreed yesterday through his attorneys in District Court to pay his estranged 75-year-old wife $112.50 a week for maintenance.

The agreement was announced after Mrs. Uline, who has been separated from her husband since 1930, testified that at her age she should have more than the bare necessities of life.

The settlement, which also includes $4500 to Mrs. Uline for attorneys fees and other expenses, is to be presented for court ratification today.

The Ulines married in 1895 and with the exception of one eight-month separation were together for 35 years until Uline left their home to come to Washington. Mrs. Uline, on the witness stand, acknowledged that they had arguments but she declined to go into aspects of the past other than this.

Mrs. Uline testified she has been ill often lately and that she would like more than the $60 a week Uline has paid her.

Mrs. Uline said she was willing to follow her husband to Washington but that he never asked her and said on one occasion that he was trying to get "far away" from his family. They have two adult children.

Mrs. Uline, who lives in Detroit, agreed under the settlement to withdraw a request that Uline be enjoined from bringing suit elsewhere in connection with the marriage.

Trial Board Acquits Officer Of Assault

Police Pvt. Ernest R. Amos, now of the Seventh Precinct, was exonerated yesterday by a police trial board of charges that he maltreated an admitted gambler while the latter was a prisoner.

The board, which heard the case last Friday, gave its decision yesterday. Members were Inspector Robert C. Pearce, chairman, Capt. John E. Agnew, and Josiah Lyman, attorney and civilian member. Beside the maltreatment, Amos was charged with conduct prejudicial to good order of the department.

Complainant in the case was Albert B. Vincent, 46, of the Dunbar Hotel. He charged he was beaten and kicked for 35 or 40 minutes by Amos last September 29 when Amos was a detective sergeant and member of the robbery squad.

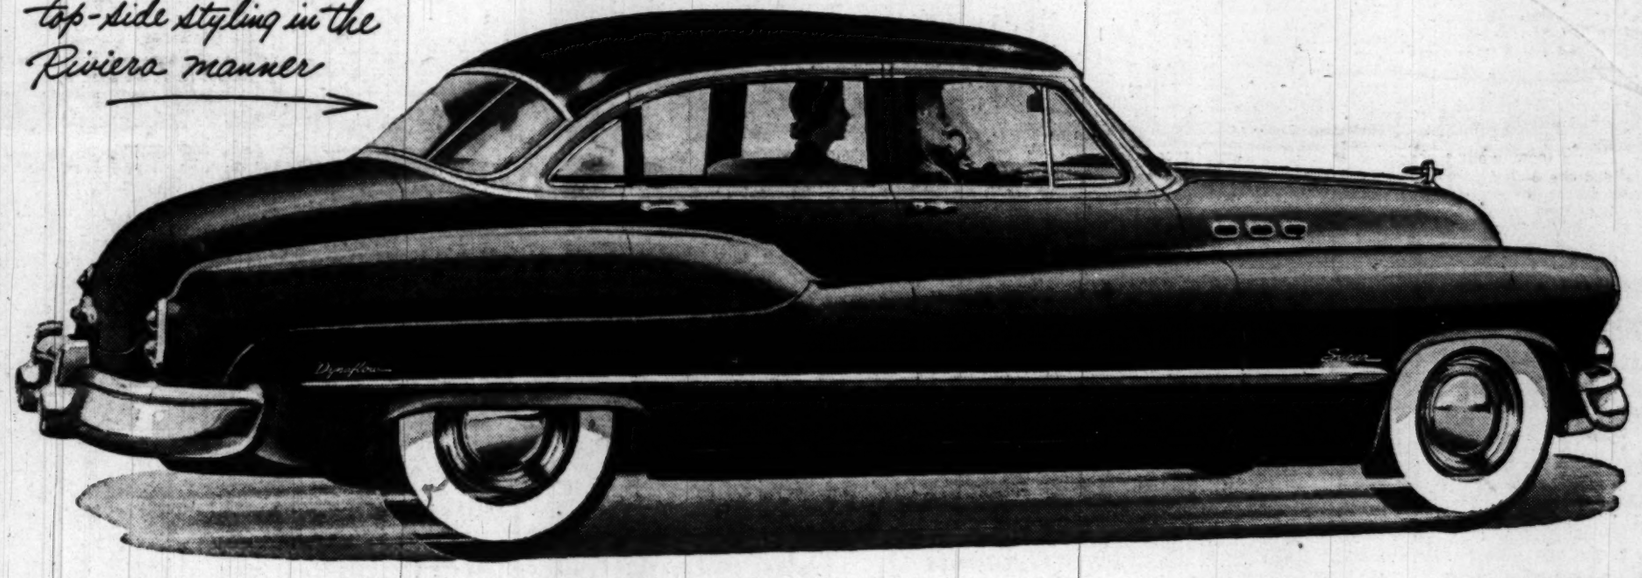
TWO-WAY STRETCH
that's strictly inside stuff!
Look! Wrap-around rear windows and top-side styling in the Riviera manner


Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.
HERE'S THE NEW 1950 BUICK SUPER 126; companion body-type to the equally new ROADMASTER 130. Both are shorter than last year's 4-door Sedans—yet 4 inches longer in wheelbase. In both, the difference is used to give you real stretch-out room in the rear seat.
What the boys did here really calls for some medals.
We gave them the job of coming up with something that was bigger inside—for room and comfort—longer in wheelbase—always important to good riding qualities—yet unbulky and easy-handling in over-all dimensions.
Just look how well this tidy number meets these "impossible" specifications!
Item one—rear-seat cushions are a full foot wider than last year's SUPERS and ROADMASTERS.
Item two—in every dimension—leg-room, head-room, hip-room, shoulder-room—this rear-seat compartment is bigger than previous models—and nearly four inches longer, fore and aft, than other 1950 Buick interiors.
Item three—wheelbases are the longest of our 1950 line. On the SUPER, it is 125½" instead of 121½"—on the ROADMASTER 130¼" instead of 126¼".
Yet—and here's where the magic comes in—the whole car is shorter over-all. Actually less from bumper to bumper than previous Buicks in these series.
That means easier parking, easier tucking away in family garages, easier maneuvering in crowded traffic.
There are some other things too. An extra rear-quarter window not found in standard 4-door Sedans. A different upperstructure styling that makes this body-type stand out as something pretty special.
Even special names that let you say, "I drive a SUPER 126" or "Mine's a ROADMASTER 130," just by way of being different.
Yes, we think we hit on a happy idea in the "Longfellows," as they're coming to be known.
They are not longer, on the outside, but there's a two-way stretch—in width and length—in the rear compartment.
You're going to like that—as you'll see by calling on your own Buick dealer. If he doesn't have one on hand, he can get it pretty promptly—and at a price and on a deal you'll have trouble matching, much less beating, anywhere else.
See him now, will you—about placing an order?

VA Budget Lines Up 3000 Administrative Jobs for Abolishment

More than 3000 administrative jobs would be abolished by the Veterans Administration under its proposed 1951 budget. Some of the cuts would be at headquarters here.

VA has 12,960 employes here. During hearings before the House Appropriations Committee on its budget, Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) told VA officials:

"It looks as though your employment figures here for the District are 20 to 25 percent too high."

When it was explained that 4000 VA employes here are in the insurance division, Thomas said this work should be transferred to the field or centralized in one place.

VA's budget proposes an increase of 1628 employes in its hospital and medical service to care for an anticipated 4800 new patients daily. Overall, the agency proposes a reduction of 1472 employes, but there are hints Congress may order a larger cutback.

PEACE? Perhaps we can learn the elusive secret to world-wide peace from the American Indians. At least officials of the Smithsonian Institution regard it as a possibility. This is the story. Honest.

Smithsonian has a research project underway on the political life of the Iroquois Indians. Dr. M. W. Stirling of the institution staff gave his explanation to Congress on the project:

"We felt that the Iroquois developed one of the earliest and most ingenious forms of a working confederation of different political groups. In view of present international needs and methods for getting different peoples together, we felt that the Iroquois furnished a fine example of a succesful application of what might be termed international relationships, within a sufficiently limited range that the factors can be sifted out and analyzed; and that there might come from that basic information some trends or law that would be of use in present times, and possibly offer some solutions to present problems."

PRESSURE: It's being "suggested" to many top-ranking Federal officials that it would be wise and politic for them to buy a ticket and attend the $100-a-plate Jackson Day dinner, the annual Democratic party fund-raising affair.

Incidentally, this is one reason why some officials are opposing most of the amendments to liberalize the Hatch "no politics" Act. Once the political bars are let down they are uneasy over what might happen.

EXAMS: Civil Service today will begin to accept applications for these new tests: staff nurse, $3100, for Indian service openings; student nurse, $752 plus extras, at St. Elizabeths Hospital here; physicist, chemist engineer and metallurgist, $3100, for jobs in laboratories of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and field representative and engineer jobs in the Rural Electrification Administration, $4600 to $5400.

ABSORB: Representative Whitten (D., Miss.), chairman of the House Appropriations Agricultural Subcommittee, says that "Congress cannot continue to increase salaries and force absorption without it being reflected in less and less work by the department." T. Roy Reid, Agriculture's personnel director, agreed with him.

Whitten, apparently, takes a different view from Representative Thomas (D., Tex.), who is insisting that the cost of the 1949 pay bill be absorbed by Government agencies. On the other hand, Whitten said he believed that too much money was used in Agriculture to pay salaries, and too little of it goes into operations.

During budget hearings, Whitten questioned whether research funds appropriated under the Research and Marketing Act could be more effectively used outside of the department. Much of the money under that law has been allocated to Agriculture's research agencies.

Traffic Aids Seen in Spread Of Work Hours

Advisory Board Seeks Data From Business Firms on Staggering

Local business firms soon will be asked whether they can conveniently institute staggered working hours to help lighten the city's rush-hour traffic problem.

Within 10 days, businesses employing more than 50 persons will receive questionnaires from the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board asking answers to these questions:

1. Is your business such that shifts in present working hours could be made without much inconvenience? and,

2. If so, what hours would best suit your business?

Mrs. Elinor Kirwan, board secretary, told reporters the staggered hours in private industry idea was suggested by the late Hobart Dickinson, and approved by the board last April 18. The questionnaires, she said, will also ask the firm's name, location and number of employes.

It was pointed out Government agencies went on staggered hours during the war and are still holding to them to spread the peak hour transportation load.

Federal agencies begin to open at 7:45 a. m., continuing to 9 a. m., and close after an 8-hour day.

How far business leaders would carry the same system remained in doubt last night.

Maurice R. Palmer, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said the "competition angle might make it very difficult in the retail trades."

Department stores, he observed, traditionally open at 9 or 9:30 a. m. and close at 6 p. m. "I doubt if you would see them agreeing to stagger their hours of business."

Man Tries To Hang Self In Cell Block

A 31-year-old laborer tried to hang himself in a cell at Municipal Court yesterday shortly after he had been ordered held for grand jury action on a housebreaking charge.

Police said Louis A. Hatchell, who had been staying at the Harrington Hotel, looped both ends of his necktie, still knotted about his neck, to the bars of the cell and slumped forward.

Two other prisoners in the cell saw him slump and loosened the tie immediately. He was sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Hatchell, who has a long police record, was arrested Saturday for the theft of $52 in cash and a half pint of whisky from the room of Mrs. Carrie G. Salmon, 85, located on the floor below his room, police said.

Mrs. Salmon told police she was napping when she woke up and saw a man in her room. She thought she was dreaming until she found the money missing, she said. She identified Hatchell as the man she saw, police said. Judge Walter D. Casey set his bond at $1500.

Supreme Court Refuses Capital Transit Appeal

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to consider a Capital Transit Co. appeal in an accident case based on a legal technicality.

CTC lost a damage verdict in District Court and failed to appeal within the specified time limit. The company said its appeal should be allowed because a court clerk failed to send in the official notice of entry of judgment.

Prisoner Testifies Wife Used Child to Smuggle Saw Blade

In Fairfax County Jail, prisoners can saw themselves to freedom in a "matter of minutes," Sheriff John Taylor complained yesterday.

Four out of five escape attempts since 1947, involving 14 men, have been successful. One convicted auto thief is still on the loose.

The latest attempted break, foiled only by chance early Tuesday morning, was disclosed yesterday in Fairfax County Trial Justice Court.

Judge Henry L. Carrico held two prisoners for action of the grand jury on charges of attempting to escape and sentenced a third to serve six months.

One of the prisoners, Paul J. Sheppard, 1127 11th st., nw., testified he had taken a hacksaw blade from the coat of his 6-year-old daughter as she was held up to a barred window by his wife Susie, for a good-by kiss, during visiting hours January 28.

With the blade, he testified, he and two companions sawed through two cells bars and were halfway through two window bars when police arrived.

Antiquated and Overcrowded

Taylor described the latest bid for freedom as "another instance of a serious situation that has got to be corrected." He said the jail was "antiquated" and "overcrowded" and listed these deficiencies:

1. The steel bars are "so soft that a hacksaw blade can cut through two or three of them in a matter of minutes."

2. There is no fence around the jail, a substantial part of which was built in 1870. "It is possible for blades or even firearms to pass into the jail unnoticed."

The Washington Post
SHERIFF TAYLOR
..."Antiquated...overcrowded"

Cecil Havens

3. A 24-hour guard of the jail was instituted only Thursday, two days after the latest escape attempt. Previously, prisoners had been guarded only 16 hours a day.

4. Capacity is 40, but occupancy averages between 55 and 60. There were 61 prisoners on the night of the most recent escape bid. There is currently no jail in Arlington, and Arlington prisoners are being kept in the Fairfax County Jail.

5. There are no separate facilities for juveniles.

6. There are only two individual cells in the jail, and prisoners are kept together. "When the jailer puts a new prisoner in, he can be overpowered without any difficulty because of the dormitory-like cells."

It is far from being an Alcatraz, according to Taylor's description.

Repairs Authorized

Recently, minor repairs were authorized and bids were asked for major repairs—replacement of all soft steel bars, and construction of a "substantial fence."

The three prisoners involved in Tuesday's frustrated jail break, Taylor said, were Sheppard, John M. Havens, 20, 1400 block of N. Hudson st., Arlington, and Max N. Cecil, 30, of Durham, N. C.

Cecil and three others others sawed their way out of the same cell on December 23, 1949, only to be arrested a few hours later.

Havens and Cecil were awaiting transfer to the Virginia State Penitentiary to serve sentences for housebreaking and larceny. Sheppard was awaiting grand jury action on charges of larceny.

Cecil and Havens pleaded innocent before Judge Carrico yesterday and were held for the grand jury. Shepperd pleaded guilty and his wife pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting the escape attempt. Judge Carrico sentenced both to serve six months but suspended sentence on Mrs. Sheppard.

Lewis, Billeci Challenge Fay In Bond Plea

Convicted Men Reply To Charge They Kept Gaming After Arrest

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Two convicted gamblers asked the United States attorney in the Court of Appeals yesterday why he has not prosecuted them more often.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay answered them later in the day with a "No comment."

The question was asked by William "Snags" Lewis and Frank Billeci in the latest round of their 10-day fight to get out of jail on bond pending appeal of their conviction for operating a numbers lottery.

Denied Bail by Holtzoff

The men were convicted January 26 in District Court and denied bail by Judge Alexander Holtzoff because they were "under suspicion of tampering with the jury" which convicted them and because the Government said it had reliable evidence they "had continued their illicit activities" since their arrest March 25, 1949.

Lewis and Billeci filed a petition for bond with the Court of Appeals on January 30.

The Government filed its answer to this petition yesterday morning, and reiterated its charge that the convicted gamblers had "defied the law" during the 11 months between their arrest and conviction.

Yesterday afternoon Lewis and Billeci, through Attorneys William H. Collins and Myron G. Ehrlich, filed an answer to the Government's answer to their petition for bond.

"The record fails to show that the appellants have conducted gambling activities after their arrest, except from the mere statement (of the Government) to the trial court," the answer to the answer said. "The same contention was made before the Circuit Court in the matter of the 11 Communists. The Circuit Court said that if such be the fact, then you have the means for further proceeding against them by arrest and prosecution.

"The appellants suggest to this honorable court that that pronouncement is equally applicable to this case and ask the question: "If they are reliably informed as has been indicated, why haven't they moved to prosecute long since?"

The Court of Appeals is expected to settle the question of bond some time today.

Lewis, described by Fay as a "big-shot gambler," was sentenced to serve 10 to 30 months. Billeci, a circulation man for the Washington Times-Herald at the time of his arrest, was sentenced to serve 8 to 27 months. They were convicted along with Attilio Acalotti, self-styled Mayor of Thomas Circle."

Judge Flays D. C. Gamblers, Jails Runner in Montgomery

A Montgomery County magistrate warned against the infiltration of District gamblers yesterday as he sentenced three persons on gaming charges.

In sentencing one of the three, Louis T. Bussard, 41, of 3015 R st. nw, Trial Magistrate Alger Y. Barbee said:

"You are one of those who makes it possible for District of Columbia operators to operate in this county."

However, in closing, the Magistrate declared, "This county is very clean because we have kept this sort of thing stamped out."

Bussard, a pie company route man, who was convicted of accepting horse race bets, was fined $200 and sentenced to 45 days in the county jail at Rockville.

Store Owners Sentenced

Also sentenced for accepting horse race bets were Melvin L. Ridgely, 49, and his wife, Mabel, 47, of Gaithersburg, Md. Together they operate Mabel's Country Store at Durwood, Md.

County Police Pvt. Leroy Phillips had testified he placed bets with all three defendants at the Ridgely store while operating in plain clothes.

Magistrate Barbee fined Ridgely $200 and suspended a three-month sentence in the Maryland House of Corrections.

"It is your responsibility," he told Ridgeley, "to see that there is no more betting in your place in the future."

Draws $100 Fine

He let off Mrs. Ridgely with a $100 fine and said:

"I believe you have had enough shock in this case so that you won't do this again."

Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the Circuit Court, and Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Price appeared as character witnesses for the Ridgelys.

The three sentenced yesterday were among eight persons arrested last November 8 in a countrywide roundup of gambling suspects.

Others Arrested

This is the status of the other five persons picked up in the November 8 roundup:

Edmond McNeil, 36, of 626 Park rd. nw., and Samuel D. Waters, 32, both employed in a valet shop at 953 Bonifant st., Silver Spring, were convicted of playing a game of chance for money in Silver Spring police court December 22.

McNeil was given the alternative of a $250 fine or 90 days in jail and Waters $150 or 60 days. They have appealed and their cases will be reviewed by the circuit court.

Robert N. Houchins, 24, of 8801 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, pleaded guilty January 16 in Bethesda police court to a charge of possessing numbers slips and was fined $250.

Ida Bassin, 33, of River rd., Bethesda, charged with setting up a gaming table, and Earl Wagner, 26, of Kensington, charged with playing a game of chance for money, are still to be tried.

Three Unreported

Police Check Four Holdups Of Gamblers

Four holdups of Washington gambling figures, unreported to police, and one burglary in the home of another member of the gambling fraternity, were still "under investigation" yesterday. But there were no results to report.

Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, made this laconic disclosure of no-progress-to-date but declined any further comment on the investigation. Some of the armed holdups were attributed to out-of-town gunmen, but at least one was credited to local talent.

The victims, according to reports picked up by newspapermen and police, but not from those robbed, were:

Robert (Ryebread) Schulman, reported to have lost $17,000 when gunmen knocked off a floating crap game in Northeast Washington, last November.

Johnny Williams, numbers racket figure, taken for an amount between $5000 and $10,000 about last Christmas.

Emmitt Warring, former numbers operator, held up early in January in his home at 3900 Massachusetts ave. nw., and reportedly robbed of $20,000 to $70,000 when he was forced to open his safe.

Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve, named as a gambler in a case involving his late father, "Big Joe" Scheve, held up January 19, while a passenger in a taxicab, robbed of an estimated $2000, and left with the cab driver on the street when the holdup men drove off in the vehicle.

William P. Moses, whose $75 safe containing a few coins, was stolen from his home at 1906 N st. nw., on January 26. Unlike the others, Moses reported his loss to police.

ABC Board Denies Club New Hearing

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday denied the non-segregated Dixie Supper Club a new hearing in its request for renewal of its liquor license.

Two members of the board, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason and James O'D. Moran, said they turned down the request because no pertinent evidence was presented that a new hearing should be held.

Mrs. Mason and Moran failed to agree on the license renewal last week. A tie vote of the two members automatically meant rejection of the application.

The third member of the board, Chairman Alan W. Payne, disqualified himself at yesterday's hearing as he had during previous consideration of the renewal request. Payne formerly lived in the Cavalier Apartments, 2528 14th st. nw., where the club is located.

Raymond Godbersen, attorney for the club, said that he will ask the District Court to issue a write of mandamus and mandatory injunction to force the board and the District Commissioners to take action.

Detective Chief Promises Probe In Shooting of Fleeing Man

A complete investigation into the shooting of George A. Turner, 22, was promised yesterday by Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives.

Turner, who is in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital, was shot in the back at about 2 a. m. Sunday by Detective Sergt. Herbert C. Young of the robbery squad.

Shortly before the shooting, Roosevelt T. Wilson, 49, of 1243 5th st. nw., called police headquarters to report he had been robbed of $25.

Actually, the robbery had occurred 48 hours earlier but police presumed it had just happened.

Young and Detective Sergt. Murray Kutner raced to Wilson's house in a robbery squad cruiser. Near the house they sighted two men running.

The men were chased for more than a block and when they failed to obey several commands to halt, Young fired and one of the men dropped. It was Turner, who lives at 417 N st. nw.

Wilson viewed Turner and said he was not the man who had robbed him.

Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad, upheld Young and Kutner yesterday, declaring:

"They had every reason to believe a felony had just been committed and that the fleeing men did it."

3 Held for Jury; 2 Called Liars in Beating Claims

Three District men were held for grand jury action in Arlington County Court yesterday after Judge Hugh Reid branded two of them "picturesque liars" on complaints they signed confessions only after police beat them.

The men, each charged with two counts of housebreaking, are Louis Lambert, 20, 819 New Hampshire ave. nw.; Wilbert White, 18, 630 Callan st., ne., and James Haskins, 37, 1438 8th st., nw. Both Lambert and White told Judge Reid police detectives beat them and forced them to sign confessions implicating Haskins.

Despite the brutality claims, White pleaded guilty to both housebreaking charges and Lambert admitted one. Haskins pleaded not guilty to both. All three were remanded in jail in lieu of $5000 bond.

"I feel it would be too severe a penalty with a child involved to send you to jail," he told the young mother. "I want you to go home and look after your child and make that your main interest."

In "Security" Section

Taylor gave this version of the attempted jail break from what is known as the "security section" of the jail:

"The jailer (William Lowe) heard strange noises just after midnight Tuesday and looked through the pantry window to see Havens and Sheppard sawing through the window bars.

"They had already sawed through two bars in their cell. Lowe called the cops and the prisoners apparently saw the police coming and darted back to the lock-up."

Probe of Blaze At Cleaning Plant Still Under Way

The fire marshal's office is continuing its investigation of the fire which swept the main plant of the Aristo Dry Cleaning Co., at 1226 S. Capitol st., Sunday.

Capt. Roy Warfield, acting fire marshal, said yesterday there was "nothing suspicious" about the blaze which caused damage estimated at $50,000. He said, however, it seemed an unusual amount of time elapsed before the fire was reported. The watchman reported he was there all the time and that he called police immediately, according to Warfield.

He added that it is still believed the fire was started by a cigarette in the plant's finishing department.

Maj. Barrett 1st Witness At Hearing On Crime

Capitol Committee To Start Prepared Expose Today; Top Officials to Testify

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A congressional subcommittee today will begin unfolding a carefully prepared expose of Washington's crime problems and law enforcement methods.

The subcommittee headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) will meet in open session at 10 a. m. to begin taking testimony of official witnesses. The hearing will be in room 445, Old House Office Bldg.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, will be the first witness, Representative Davis said.

He will be followed by other top officials of the Police Department.

Prepared by Fischbach

Davis said the material to be presented in the formal hearings has been "pretty well gone over" in advance by Hyman I. Fischbach, special committee counsel.

The five-member subcommittee headed by Davis was picked from the membership of the House District Committee. Other members are Representatives Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.), Sid Simpson (R., Ill.) and James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.).

The group is operating under authority of the House, granted by a special resolution, and has full subpena powers. Fischbach and Investigator John Woog have been at work on preliminary studies, the basis for the hearings, since last fall.

Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel, has been chief liaison man between the District Government and its law enforcement agencies, of which the main one is the police department, and the subcommittee staff.

Ranking Officers Briefed

Chief Barrett and Maher have given other ranking police officers a briefing on what the subcommittee probably will ask them, it was learned yesterday.

The briefing session was held Saturday morning on the fifth floor of the Municipal Center Building, headquarters of the Metropolitan Police.

Besides ranking officials, the session was attended by heads of the most active detective squads.

They were told they would be asked the number of men in their squads, what their work is, and how the work is accomplished. They were also advised to familiarize themselves with such matters as the statistics related to their special work, and to be prepared to give accurate accountings of these records.

Maher was also reported to have advised the detectives to feel free to answer any questions the subcommittee may ask about "gripes" they may have.

Davis said that the subcommittee will hear only the witnesses it calls. He emphasized this is an investigation and not a wide-open hearing. He stressed, however, that persons who feel they should be heard can apply to the committee, and if the information they present is relevant and pertinent, they will be heard.

Davis said the hearings might take 6 to 12 days.

Congressman's Radio Stolen From Auto

Burglars don't respect Congressmen. Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) reported to police yesterday that on Sunday night a friend borrowed his auto. Sunday night, he said, it was parked in the 4600 block of Connecticut ave. nw.

Yesterday, Representative Cooley said, the friend discovered that though the car was locked, thieves broke in and stole the radio. Several years ago, thieves stole a typewriter from Cooley's auto, but police recovered it in a pawn shop.

Hit-Run Injuries Fatal to Waiter

Hugo Schueller, 71, veteran Shoreham Hotel waiter, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital, victim of a hit-and-run driver.

He was struck by a car at 2:15 a. m. on January 28, at 51st ave. and Marlboro Pike, Hillside, while walking to his home at 1224 57th ave., Hillside.

Visited in Austria

Only two weeks before he had returned from a four-month trip to his native Austria where he visited relatives.

Police said two witnesses saw the car strike Schueller and speed on. They told police the car was a 1939 Chrysler bearing District tags. However, they did not get the tag numbers.

Born in Austria on March 27, 1878, Schueller was head waiter at the Majestic Hotel in Paris when World War I erupted.

Interned in France

He was interned in France as an enemy alien during the war. He came to this country in 1922 and worked as a waiter in various cities. He had been at the Shoreham for the past 15 years.

Schueller had no relatives in this country. His wife and a sister live in Vienna, another sister lives elsewhere in Austria, and a brother lives in Germany.

Friends of Schueller, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kiser of 6500 Chestnut st., Chevy Chase, Md., are taking charge of funeral arrangements. They said he will be buried in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

George Andrews Morris, 74, listed as a laborer of Grottoes, Va., was killed yesterday when he was struck by an auto on Route 12, half a mile north of Grottoes.

Virginia State Trooper H. E. McInturff said the car was driven by Raymond L. Kendrick, 51, of Luray, Va. He said Kendrick told him he saw Morris on the roadside, but the the man suddenly lurched in front of his car. McInturff said a technical charge of reckless driving by colliding will be filed against Kendrick.

3 Hurt in 2-Car Crash

Three persons were injured in a 10 a. m. two-car crash yesterday on Viers Mill rd. near Midway ave. in Rockville, Md. The drivers were Lyndon M. Kidwell, 21, of 1472 Newton st. nw., and Arthur Sheinbaum, 3, of 6030 8th st. nw.

Kidwell was treated for a fractured hand at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, and a passenger in his car, Courtney Wilkerson, 50, of White Oak, Md., was treated for a leg injury.

Sheinbaum was treated at the scene for head lacerations by the Rockville rescue squad.

Police said Kidwell told them he pulled out of the line of traffic and skidded into Sheinbaum's oncoming car. Kidwell was charged with reckless driving and ordered to appear Thursday in Rockville police court for a hearing. He was released in $200 bond.

Condemning Brings Home Improvement

Condemnation notices filed 15 days ago will bring oil heat, gas cooking, and inside toilets to at least six of 10 row houses in the 4800 block of 41st st. nw.

The Negro families living in the six houses will either remain there or will be permitted to move back in after remodeling is completed, it was learned.

The Board for the Condemnation of Unsanitary Buildings for the District considered the dwellings so unsanitary as to endanger the health of the occupants and neighbors.

Today, a 15-day period runs out in which owners of the houses were to complete repairs, remove the occupants, or ask for an extension.

Extension was granted until April 8 for the frame house at 4040 Ellicott st. nw. The five homes adjoining 4823 to 4831 41st st. nw., owned by Raymond R. Ruppert, are being remodeled, but no extension has as yet been granted.

Sources close to the condemnation board said the board is generally lenient about granting the extension. Board member William H. Carey said occupancy may continue if repair work progresses.

The owner of the five 41st st. homes being repaired said he would ask for about a $10-a-month rent raise on the houses which now rent from $18 to $21 a month.

The owner said he had been asked several times by residents in the predominantly white neighborhood to remove the Negro families. He said, however, that he will allow current occupants to remain and has found temporary housing for those of his tenants who will be forced to move out during remodeling.

The other four houses, extending from 4815 to 4821 41st st., were recently sold by Ben A. King, who was represented by the C. Irving Wood real estate firm, 1220 Wisconsin ave. nw. The new landlord was not available for comment on plans for the condemned houses.

House Bill Would Ban Transit Broadcasts

He said he rides the streetcars and buses here and objects to the radio broadcasts in them. The measure was sent to the House District Committee.

Nation's Jobless Jumps 991,000, To Postwar High

Unemployment jumped 991,000 in January, sending the number of jobless to 4,480,000—highest since the war.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, announcing the development, issued a statement that said:

"A sizable increase in unemployment is to be expected between December and January because of seasonal developments.

"It is noteworthy that industrial employment did not appear to be materially affected. A year ago industrial layoffs were an important factor in the rise in unemployment."

The number with jobs—56,947,000 in January—dropped 1,609,000.

The full force of this decline did not show up in unemployment, however, because many of those losing jobs dropped out of the labor market, at least temporarily.

The biggest part of the decline in job opportunities was outside of farming, where openings declined by 1,034,000 as compared with a 575,000 decline in farm jobs.

Figures compiled by the Census Bureau in a survey covering the week ended January 14, showed unemployment had climbed 1,816,000 over the last 12 months.

Next step, Blair said, is for the board to pass a resolution asking Fairfax County Circuit Court to order an election on the question. The referendum must be held within 20 days after the court orders it, Blair said.

Three Indicted On Charges Of Murder

Three men were indicted by the grand jury yesterday on murder charges.

Hazel Cunningham, 25, of 1021 New Jersey ave. nw., was indicted for first degree murder in the death of Mrs. Katherine C. Morrow, 24, of 1216 U st. nw., who was fatally shot December 10 during an argument which followed a card game.

The grand jury did not act on a charge of murder placed by police against Cunningham in connection with the death of Mrs. Morrow's husband, Melvin, 23, who was fatally shot during the same argument.

Robert Henry, 18, of 1128 Vermont ave. nw., was indicted on charges of second degree murder and carrying a deadly weapon. Police said he admitted shooting Ignacio Butler, 15, of 738 7th st. se., during an argument between two rival gangs of teenagers in the 1200 block of Howieson pl. nw., January 14.

Stabbed to Death

Indicted on a charge of second degree murder was Hewitt J. "Pop" Johnson, 53, of 904 S st. nw. He was arrested December 31 following an argument that morning during which Woodrow W. Jones, 34, of 1528 S st. nw., was stabbed to death at Florida ave. and V st. nw.

Police said Schwenk fired a shot at his former fiancee, Muriel A. Rowley, 17, of 510 Jefferson st. nw., December 17, while she talked with her mother, Mrs. Nettie C. Rowley, and a friend, Pvt. William H. Comstock, of Andrews Air Force Base, at Riverside Stadium. The bullet missed.

Frazier was arrested November 4 in a restaurant in the 2800 block of Georgia ave. nw. and Brooks December 22 in a delicatessen in the 1600 block of 14th st. nw. All four men were arrested by vice squad men on warrants after plays were made with each of them by an undercover man, police said.

Indicted on a charge of assault on a member of the police force was Isaac E. Coleman, 39, of 3820 N. 6th st., Arlington. Police said he struck Pvt. Robert E. Rayner, of the Fourteenth Precinct, while being booked on a drunk charge January 21.

Judges Back D. C. Alcohol Clinic Plans

Plans for operation of the District's Alcoholic Clinic were approved yesterday by Municipal Court judges.

Meeting with Clinic Director Leopold E. Wexburg and Col. E. Goring Bliss, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Alcoholic Clinics, the judges indorsed the plans in their entirety as they were announced last December.

Dr. Wexberg said later the clinic, to be located at 23d and M sts. nw., will probably open next week although no definite date has been set, pending final approval of the plans by the District Commissioners.

The program calls for a clinic staff member to screen drunks who have been brought into court for trial. About five or six of the 40 to 200 appearing there daily will be recommended for clinic treatment.

On the staff member's recommendations, the presiding judge may authorize the commitment of persons to the clinic for periods up to 90 days. It may be extended for another 90-day period.

A probation officer, who will work only on the cases recommended to the clinic, will be added to the probation office staff at Municipal Court. He will supervise both those persons who are permitted to remain at liberty while receiving treatment at the clinic and those persons placed in an agency or hospital for treatment as chronic alcoholics.

A three-man working committee, consisting of a Muicipal Court judge, a representative of the District Commissioners and Bliss will handle the problems arising in connection with the clinic's operation. The two committee members who will work with Bliss have not yet been named.

Charter Seen Aid to Fairfax Annexation

Success of a Falls Church plan to annex part of Fairfax County hinges on a new city charter now pending before the General Assembly, City Attorney LaRue Van Meter said yesterday.

Speaking at the February meeting of the Falls Church Chamber of Commerce, Van Meter never specifically mentioned Falls Church, but said he was devoting his remarks to the "hypothetical city of Fell Clutch." He made it clear, however, that he was referring to his own community.

Previous efforts to annex new territory and to take other "progressive steps" have been hampered by an obsolete and inadequate charter, Van Meter declared. He said the new charter would give the city a solid government which would enable it to "fight its own battles as a unified community."

Van Meter said a principal shortcoming of the old charter was a clause which limited referendums on important public matters to "freeholders"—residents who own property in the city. Under the new charter, all qualified voters would be given a voice in such decisions.

The new charter was approved by the City Council last week.

Judge Denies Writ To Stop CIO Purge Of Leftist Unions

The United Office and Professional Workers failed yesterday in an effort to get a preliminary injunction to stop a CIO purge of left-wing unions.

Federal Judge Burnita Matthews turned down their plea.

Judge Matthews' ruling freed the CIO to go ahead with its hearings and possible ouster of 10 unions charged with following a Communist Party line rather than CIO policy.

The CIO executive board, meeting here February 15, will act on the recommendations of committees that have been hearing charges of Communist domination against most of the 10 unions.

State Honor Days Planned for Sesqui

Postponement of Freedom Fair until 1951 will provide an opportunity to emphasize other events in this year's sesquicentennial celebration, Lawrence B. Slater said yesterday.

Speaking to a meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association in the Mayflower Hotel, the assistant director of the Sesquicentennial Commission said a program of at least 75 celebration dates this year will be announced shortly.

Special State Honor Days are planned, he said, during which each of the States will celebrate the sesqui at home in conjunction with festivities here.

Several of the States are planning to send delegations here for their celebrations and between 10,000 and 15,000 Hoosiers are expected July 12, Indiana's honor day, Slater said.

The association voted to send representatives to a Board of Education hearing Friday to oppose the transfer of Central High School to use of Cardozo students.

Last October, the group recommended transferring Wilson Teachers College to Roosevelt High School and moving the overflow Negro pupils of Cardozo High School to Wilson Teachers College.

Minnesota Center

The McMillan bill to give control of swimming pools and playgrounds here to the District Commissioners was indorsed last night by the Minnesota Center Citizens Association.

Meeting in the City Bank Building, 3839 Minnesota ave. ne., the group authorized a letter to the Board of Education expressing the association's opposition to the transfer of Cardozo High School to Central High School.

Forest Hills

The Forest Hills Citizens Association last night asked the District Commissioners to install a ramp so southbound traffic on the Rock Creek Parkway would be able to make a right turn into the Whitehurst Freeway.

Meanwhile, the association asked that signs be put up indicating just how southbound parkway motorists could enter the freeway.

The 20 persons present at the meeting in the Ben Murch School voted to indorse the proposed abolition of the personal property tax insofar as it relates to the personal property of householders.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens Association last night indorsed School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning's recommendation to transfer 500 Cardozo High School pupils to Park View Elementary School instead of transferring Cardozo to Central High School.

The group also called upon the District Commissioners to reduce the real estate tax from $2.15 to $1.75. A United Airlines color film, "Trip to Hawaii," was shown at the meeting in the Whittier School, 5th and Sheridan sts. nw.

National Gateway

Gilbert C. Vincent, president of the National Gateway Citizens Association, last night criticized the Federation of Citizens Associations for acting without first testing the sentiment of member associations.

Specifically, Vincent criticized the fedeartion's public utilities committee for attempting to formulate policy on the proposed transit fare increases before the opinions of citizens associations had been heard.

Meeting at the Church of Christ, 28th and Douglas sts. ne., the National Gateway group voted to oppose any fare increase and asked for the retention of the weekly pass.

Takoma

More than 200 persons last night attended the annual dinner of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., at the Emory Methodist Church, Georgia ave. and Quackenbos st. nw.

The Kenilworth Citizens Association last night voted against turning over Central High School to Negro use.

The group indorsed the stand of the Federation of Citizens Associations in asking the Federal Government to contribute 40 percent of the District budget.

The meeting in the Kenilworth Recreation Center also adopted resolutions asking that a traffic light be installed at Eastern and Kenilworth aves.; and asking the Capital Transit Co. to reinstall a light at the bus terminal on Kenilworth ave. near Eastern ave. and permit passengers to board at the terminal.

Michigan Park

The Michigan Park Citizens Association last night voted to ask retention of Central High School for white students at a Board of Education hearing Friday.

Meeting at the Bunker Hill School, the group of about 85 also indorsed the McMillan bill to vest control of District recreational facilities in the District Commissioners. The association donated $25 to the Police Boys Club campaign.

Clark vs. Dewey

Apartment Row Back to Lower Court

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday decided Municipal Court should take another fling at settling the Navy's big-name family squabble over occupancy of a swank 2500 Massachusetts ave. apartment.

Mrs. Shannon Clark, wife of Rear Admiral Joseph J. "Jocko" Clark, owner of the $200,000 Embassy Row apartment building, has been fighting in court to evict the last remaining tenant—Edward B. Dewey, identified as a great-nephew of Admiral George Dewey of Manila Bay fame.

For the appellate court, Judge Charles Fahy took issue with a summary judgment handed down last year by Municipal Court Judge Frank H. Myers which was in Mrs. Clark's favor. Dewey contested Myers' refusal to allow a jury to decide the tenancy issue.

Sent Back for Jury Trial

Yesterday's opinion sent the controversial case back to Municipal Court for jury trial.

Mrs. Clark has contended she wants the Dewey apartment, consisting of 10 rooms, for herself, husband, grandchildren and servants.

Dewey has countered that the admiral's wife wanted the quarters to sell with other apartments in the building in a cooperative venture.

Mrs. Clark insists she never considered the Dewey apartment in the cooperative plan, that she needs it for her "personal use and occupancy."

Ordering a jury trial and taking issue with Judge Myers' summary, Fahy observed:

"Upon trial there will be opportunity for cross-examination and the question of credibility will be left to the triers of fact. Given the evidence we have set forth from the pleadings, depositions and affidavits, . . . together with the subjective character of good faith, we believe that this issue is not so shadowy or unreal as to lack genuineness. Once this appears, he who requests a trial is entitled to it. A directed verdict would not be proper."

Charged Interference

In the course of the litigation, Dewey brought a court action, charging that Mrs. Clark and her agents have interfered with him and his guests.

The apartment fight reached the point last month where District Court Richmond B. Keech issued a preliminary injunction maintaining the status quo in the controversy.

The injunction, signed with consent of both parties, said in effect that Mrs. Clark must not forcibly enter the apartment at issue or interfere with the tenants there, and that Dewey is restrained from allowing guests to be disorderly or have them at unreasonable hours until the courts settle the case.

Covenant Ruling In Building Sale Due in Arlington

An Arlington Circuit Court jury will attempt to determine today whether a restrictive covenant placed on a building in 1944 is still applicable, even though the structure has been twice sold.

The covenant, included in a sales contract when the Rev. Francis J. Lukens sold the property to the Rev. Charles O. Benham, provided the original purchase price would be increased by $4820 if the building were used for any other than religious purposes. Counsel for the Rev. Lukens contend the covenant still was in effect when the building was sold a second time to Talmadge Wilcher, an Arlington real estate broker, in 1945.

The minister is seeking a judgment from Wilcher for the $4820 on the ground the property is no longer used "wholly" for religious purposes.

Moving Sidewalk Proposed to Ease House 'Hoofing'

Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.) yesterday proposed a House study of subway transportation for its members.

Senators have two underground mono-rail streetcars to transport them between the Capitol and their office building.

House members walk, either through a subway, or outdoors, from their offices to the Capitol. Recent use of the roll-call as a legislative slow-down or filibuster weapon has increased the daily travel of House members.

Eberharter proposed the House Office Building Commission study the problem. He said he is thinking in terms of a moving sidewalk or conveyor belt arrangement.

Democrats—2000 Strong—Greet Veep and Bride

By Marie McNair

"THERE just can't be any Republicans left," said someone caught in the line that formed yesterday in the Shoreham lobby for the Woman's National Democratic Club reception.

The queue at one time reached from the front door down the west corridor, down the stairs and finally into the main ballroom. The reason for the crush? Some 2000 people eager to meet Vice President Barkley and his bride.

Members of the Woman's National Democratic Club really put on a show. They had Barnee playing the piano with his orchestra on the stage. They massed the huge room with flowers—flame and white gladioli flown up from Florida through Mrs. Claude Pepper's contriving; and hundreds of orchids decorating the buffet tables and the bars, by courtesy of the Exotic Gardens of Miami.

Mrs. Barkley pinned two crimson-tipped white orchids to her purse, a pleasing accessory to her black velvet frock made with wide oval neckline and net yoke band. They were also in harmonious contrast to the cloche of pale pink apple blossoms which fashioned her hat.

Every Member Plays Her Part

INTRODUCING the guests to "Mr. and Mrs. Veep" was Mrs. Julian Friant, president of the club, in a gown of powder blue lace with a halo hat of deeper shade.

Practically every member of the club had had a hand in the party. The arrangement committee was on hand yesterday to keep things moving in the right direction. Mrs. Estes Kefauver, chairman, in a gray taffeta frock and feather hat, had stationed her aides at various posts throughout the room. Mrs. Mike Monroney, Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Clifford Davis stood like sentinels; Mrs. Fred Morrison and Mrs. Oscar Cox, were here and there, moving through the throng.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, member of the special guests committee, came early, left early. Mrs. Tom Connally, cochairman of the special guests committee with Mrs. Borden Harriman, was there; and I saw another committee member, Mrs. Curtis Shears, with Mr. Shears.

The Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe Morgenstierne, and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, as special guests, were put through the line promptly. So was Henri Bonnet, the French Ambassador, who came with his Minister-Counselor, Jean Daridan, as Mme. Bonnet is ill.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and his sister, Mrs. Edward Bartley, were surrounded by friends. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the former Secretary of State, had an orchid pinned to her fur jacket by Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who was on the special guests committee, was busy shepherding friends about the room.

Club Presents Veep With Picture Frame

VICE PRESIDENT and Mrs. Barkley stood for an hour and 15 minutes, then gave up just as the line had about reached its end. Before they left, they received a silver picture frame from the club, and the Veep made a speech in return. He thanked them all for having given Mrs. Barkley such a warm welcome to Washington, and when he asked for a vote on the "prize" he had won in Missouri, he received a unanimous "aye."

Then, the first 300 ladies with green admittance cards got an orchid each, the card drawn from the hat by Mrs. Barkley.

Glimpsed here and there were the Iceland Minister and Mme. Thors, Camille Gutt, Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund; Presidential Secretary and Mrs. Charles Ross, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Walter George, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Elizabeth Nowinski, Miss Bertha Joseph, Mrs. Max Gardner, Mrs. Walter George, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Loren Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burke, Mrs. Benjamin Lingo, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Fay Lewisohn, Mrs. Robert Garner and Mrs. Morris Cafritz.

Bartelt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. James E. McPherson, Mrs. Vance Weaver, Miss McCall Henderson, daughter of the hostess, Senator Clyde R. Hoey, and Lieut. Col. Charlie C. McCall, brother of the hostess.

MRS. O. MAX GARDNER gets a special greeting from Vice President and Mrs. Alben Barkley at the reception in their honor yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel given by the Woman's National Democratic Club. Mrs. Gardner is cochairman with Charles Luckman of the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, to be held February 16

Mme. Erkin Sings At Embassy Tea

MME. ERKIN, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, invited a small group of friends for music and tea yesterday, one of a series of afternoon fetes which she is giving this season.

Seated in the pleasant drawing room were Mme. New Sewing Club For Mothers With Small Children

By Jean Belaire

Sewing club groups have been planned to fill the needs of young mothers with small children of school or pre-school age and a minimum amount of free time in which to plan and make wardrobes for themselves and the children. These mothers are taught how to make clothing out of anything from father's out-worn tuxedo to flour sacks. Big sister's last year's dress becomes baby's first play suit. This class meets the need for every conceivable type of sewing for the home, from draperies to dungarees. The members of this group who wish to bring along children of pre-school age are extended the privilege of using one of the classrooms as a nursery during this morning period, with the provision that each group will independently arrange to employ one supervisor for every ten children. The school is equipped with a complete electric kitchen and is air-conditioned. Children can be taken to a park within a block of the school in fair weather. If this is your idea of heaven, you'll find it at The Belaire School of Practical Dress Design, at 821 19th St. N.W. STerling 9040.

Quiz on Trieste Stumps Anne; but She'll Tell You How to Get a D. C. Permit for Yummy Charcoal Steaks

DEAR ANNE:

We are being sent to Trieste, Italy, the latter part of May. I would appreciate it very much if someone could give me some first-hand information about living there—what sort of clothes we'll need, supplies that may be hard to get, should we take furniture or can we find a furnished place, etc. We're a couple with a 3½-year-old child. C. B. B.

Any help for C. B. B., readers?

DEAR ANNE:

Our new house is being built in Southeast Washington and we plan to move in early spring. We'd like to build a charcoal grill outdoors, but hear there are certain restrictions in the District. Can you tell me what the specifications are, if a permit is needed, etc.? S. S. S.

Yes, you're going to need a permit but they're not hard to get. Draw up your plans (or clip them from a magazine or other source) and take them down to the director of inspection in the Old District Building, 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

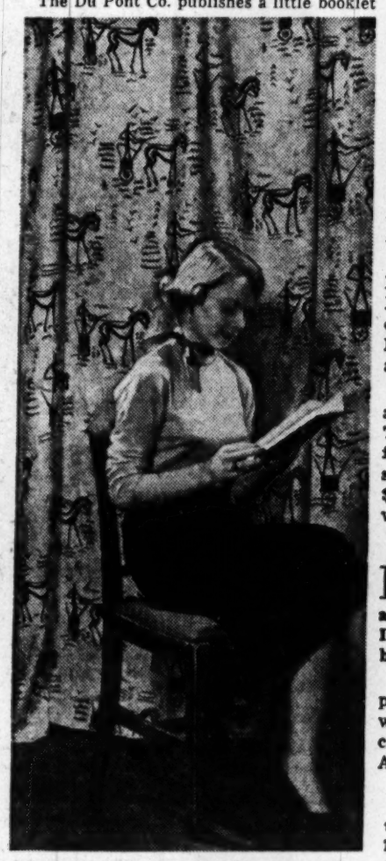
In order to pass muster, your plans must call for building the grill at a safe distance from the house and with a stack tall enough for safety under your particular circumstances. Once plans are approved, the District will issue you a permit for a nominal fee.

DEAR ANNE:

In response to Mrs. E. G.'s request for ideas to make a white enameled table suitable for a living-room end table, I would suggest that she consider "antiquing" it.

She could either leave it white and apply the antique glaze over it, which would give a nice, mellow appearance. Or she could paint it a color that would blend with the other colors in the room, then apply the glaze.

The Du Pont Co. publishes a little booklet called "Transfer-Magic" which gives complete directions for making and applying the glaze and wonderful ideas for decorating. Stores that sell this paint probably have the booklet or any reputable paint shop could tell her what to buy for the job. R. B.



ROAMIN' ROMANS: Charioteers ramble in stark relief across a new drapery print introduced here last week

BIRDS, bees and bouquets tumble all over one piece of fabric we saw last week at an opening for some new drapery materials and wall papers. Looks like walls and windows are going to be gayer than ever here at the half-century mark!

This fabric, called "Doves," was in a collection shown by Julore at the Carlton Hotel. It has a Frenchy look, much less definite in outline than another called "Charioteer." Roman figures stand out boldly in this one against a mottled background.

Incidently, young artists are going to get a break in connection with this fabric line. The Julore company is staging a competition for original fabric and wallpaper designs, strictly for students. The national prize is $1000. You can enter through the Hecht Co., which carries the Julore fabrics.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you possibly tell me where to obtain a copy of the December Holiday magazine. I have tried to order one from the publisher but they have no more. B. H.

I understand that this was a particularly popular issue of the magazine. I don't know where you could get hold of one except, of course, on loan from the Public Library. Any suggestions, readers?

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit telephone or direct mail replies. Address all letters to Anne, Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses will be used unless a request is made to the contrary.

Hints to the Homemaker . . .

It is impossible to judge from looking at a lemon just how much juice it contains. Play safe and if the recipe calls for the juice of one lemon use three tablespoons of juice.

If the water pipe seeps through a tiny bit, wind it with adhesive tape or bicycle tape and brush over with shellac. A small leak can be mended in this way very successfully.

Before pouring milk from the bottle, be sure to wipe off the top carefully. It is here germs and dust collect and can be poured quite easily into the glass along with the pure milk.

Cotton Faded by Freezing

It is wise to dry the colored cotton garments in the house in the bitter cold weather. They will lose some of their color if allowed to freeze on the line.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Attractive Young Bachelor Frustrates Girl With His Attentions, Which Are Perennial But Gallantly Inconsequential; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How can a person look at her own problem clearly? Here are the facts: John is 33, I am 27, and we started dating seven years ago when I was his secretary on a war board. Due to a severe illness in his childhood, he was disqualified for combat service; and when we started dating he remarked that it was "only until the other boys got back."

However, we are still dating steadily, but in all these years he has never mentioned marriage (seriously, I mean) and neither has he ever told me that he loves me. He is so charming at times that I know he must love me, and yet he is forgetful at other times, neglecting to send a corsage for a dance or to compliment me on a new dress.

Marriage to him never entered my thoughts until three years ago, when most of our friends started getting married—and that was a very difficult period. However, my invalid mother would become worse at mention of my marrying, so I put the thought from me as much as possible. She passed away about a year ago, and my older married sister and her husband have made a home for dad and me since.

She Tries Vainly to Renounce Him

JOHN IS a college graduate, good looking, with a good position in society, and he is very intelligent and has a fairly good sense of humor. I am considered attractive, easy to get along with, have a good sense of humor (I believe), and I am a high school graduate, locally employed. John runs his mother's farm for her, she being widowed 15 years ago, and he is devoted to her. She is such a lovely lady that I can understand his devotion.

I love John very much and he knows it, but twice in the last 18 months I have decided that I couldn't drift in this situation any longer and we stopped dating. But the boys I dated thereafter seemed as nothing, and after several weeks John would either call up or come around to see me and soon we would be dating again. How can I overcome this situation and get the peace of mind I want? Should I move to another city where I have relatives and friends? What should I do? C. K.

Man Is Anchored to Mom-Attachment

DEAR C. K.: To be alive and somewhat self-aware in this uncertain universe is to feel some justified anxiety about one's chances of survival and so-called future.

Thus to participate in the ordinary routine of human affairs with any degree of spontaneous interest—i.e., with some margin of freedom from basic anxiety—it is necessary for the individual to feel emotionally cherished in a mutually attentive close relationship with another person—someone to whom his existence is (he feels) of vital importance.

This type of relationship is a source of emotional security, and those who have it appear to be self-reliant, somewhat self-sufficient, etc., whereas those who don't have it are always striving compulsively to find it. Mother-care (or a good facsimile) is the individual's first experience of this sustaining relationship that, at its best, somewhat frees him from inherent anxiety about survival and thus enables him to take an interest in life—an interest that, in turn, energizes his social faculties and marks him a healthy specimen.

But, you may ask, what has this got to do with your problem? As I see the situation, John's "protective" devotion to his mother, when contrasted with his negligently admiring frivolous use of your time, definitely indicates that his personality is heavily involved in a security-attachment to her, that robs him of inclination to bid for a significantly serious and responsible love-relationship with you.

Get Out of Rut to Quicken Spirit

THUS THOUGH his position may be one of weak dependency, as compared to norm patterns of mature love partnership, nevertheless it gives him stolidity of sorts in frustrating your attempts either to marry him or renounce him. He has no drive to change his situation, nor any urge to quit you. He is passively content with his domestic regime and you are his favorite relief from it—hence he can take your ultimatums without panic and then drift back to resume companionship when he thinks the time is expedient.

You have no comparable buffer relationship, hence his casual rejection of your implied appeal for special consideration accelerates your basic anxieties and foments the strain of conscious frustration also. You don't love John as much as you crave love-security, as indeed all humans do. And you cling to him fixedly after hope is gone, simply because you unconsciously assumed he was the ordained answer to your prayer, before you learned differently from experience.

For advice, look at the situation objectively and let him slide. Don't fight your needs and hopes—but channel your efforts in new directions, away from the stalemate. Long frustration has diminished your interest in life and your faith in yourself, temporarily, so that you've become less able to participate spontaneously in new experiences, hence feel nothing in common with new dates. The cure for this apathy is to climb determinedly out of the rut into which you've been sinking for seven years, and meet the world of fresh opportunity halfway.

D. C. Woman on U. S. Slate Of League of Women Voters

By Genevieve Reynolds

MRS. ROBERT F. LEONARD of this city yesterday was nominated first vice president of the League of Women Voters of the United States. At the same time Mrs. John G. Lee of Farmington, Conn., was named the league's presidential nominee. All candidates will be voted on at the organization's national convention slated for April 24-28 in Atlantic City.

From 1945 to 1947, Mrs. Leonard was president of the D. C. League of Women Voters. Prior to that she was a director and then a vice president of the local league.

The slate of new officers was announced yesterday by Mrs. Walter F. Fisher of Winnetka, Ill., chairman of the nominating committee. League nominations generally are tantamount to elections. Only upset in the slate came in 1944 when Miss Anna Lord Strauss, current president of the national league, was elected.

Mrs. Lee is a descendant of a suffrage leader. Her mother, Hiram Stephens Maxim who in a famous suffragette and founder of the Connecticut League of Women Voters. Both Mrs. Lee's grandfather and father were famous inventors. It was her grandfather, Sir Hiram Stephens Maxim who invented the famous Maxim gun which he sold to Great Britain after this country rejected the invention.

Since 1944 Mrs. Lee has been a member of the national league's board.

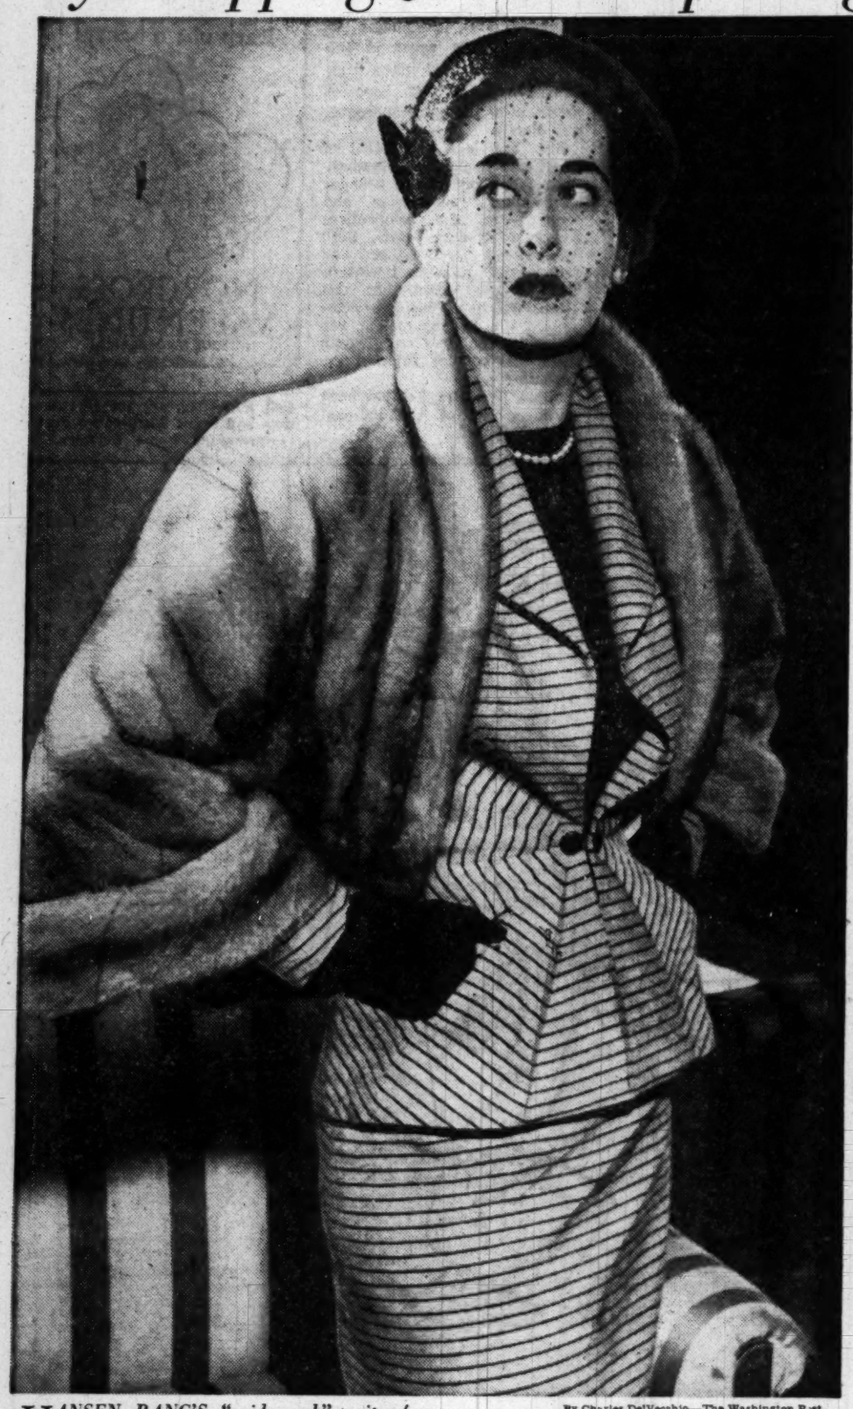
Eye-Stopping Jackets Top Bang Spring Collection

By Peggy Preston



By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

HANSEN BANG'S "spider-web" suit of gray, black-striped wool is one of the classics from his 1950 spring collection. It is worn here with short cape-jacket of silver-blue mink, one of the briefly styled luxury furs favored for the coming season. Ensemble available at Pasternak's

SIMPLE, creative handling of interesting fabrics, a trade mark of Designer Hansen Bang for over a quarter of a century, is again the outstanding note in his 1950 spring collection.

This newest group of costumes from the Bang Salon in New York is being featured locally at Pasternak's. There, in the showroom, the spectator may get a close-up view of the novel interpretations given 1950 fashions by the Swiss-born Mr. Bang.

For a formal showing here over the week-end, Mr. Bang brought along spring and cruise wear, three evening dresses which he designed in 1925. Apparently he brought these out of hiding to prove that he for one, wants no return to the dropped hipline and knee-length skirts of that by-gone flapper era. By contrast, for 1950, he showed graceful, full skirted dance frocks, most of them just above ankle length.

Smart Little Jackets Are Eye-Stoppers

HOWEVER, it was his smartly cut jackets and ship-or-shore greatcoats that attracted most attention. His little toppers, often cut like boleros, are easily the eye-stoppers of his group. Waistline length, they have great variety of detail. Rounded shoulders are molded to meet self-material bands placed high on sleeves and across center back . . . dolman sleeves that spread from a moth-wing back . . . winged pockets placed a few inches below the shoulder . . . novel button arrangements.

These are the touches that make these jaunty little wool jackets cunning accessories for wear over a new spring print, or a summer cotton. Many are lined with the same print or dotted silk of their companion dresses to complete a pretty ensemble.

Mr. Bang does greatcoats in rough textured monotone tweed, or in red, white and blue bold plaid. These, cut in circular fashion from shoulder to hem, have tremendous fullness and swagger. They may be worn belted or allowed to swing free.

Finds Perfect Medium In Pliable Fabrics

IN THE lighter, more pliable fabrics Mr. Bang finds a perfect medium for his simply cut dresses and suits. Raw silk, in a linen-like weave, gets handsome treatment in a dress cut to give a two-piece effect. This same "Buretta" fabric, natural in shade, appears again in a full length cruise coat with bloused back. It's lined in navy and white polka dot to match the companion dress. Sheer wools that resemble crepe, alpaca and pure silks are other fabrics that find much favor with the House of Bang this season.

Bang's color story includes cool pistachio green, watermelon, pimento red and the range of neutrals from oyster white to yellow beige. Navy scores as his favorite dark basic shade.

Paris Offers Two 1950 Silhouettes

WITH the ending of the spring fashion showings in Paris, two general silhouettes appear to sum up the major trends in that style-conscious capital.

Sally Swing, United Press staff correspondent, reporting from Paris concludes:

"One has the choice of a flapper girl silhouette, or a slim tube shape with fullness either at the bottom of the skirt or over the shoulders.

"The gap has widened between couturiers who like the 1920s and those who don't.

"Led by slim, blond Jacques Fath, the pro 20s group which includes Balmain, Jeanne Lanvin and Greek designer Jean Desses, created a bulky waistline. From top to toe this silhouette is small head, short hair, deep or medium "V" neck, rounded shoulders, boxy long waisted jacket, short straight skirt, pointed shoes.

"In the other corner there's Christian Dior, followed by Edward Molyneux, Schiaparelli, Robert Piquet, Jacques Heim and Carven.

"The Dior silhouette is small head, normal shoulders, deep tuxedo type collar, with straight bodice underneath, tight waist well in place, and hip-hugging skirt, belling out with gores at the bottom.

Designers Unanimous For Lots of Pleats

"ALL Paris couturiers, of course, agreed on some things: lots of pleating, skirts between 15½ and 16½ inches from the floor, interest in balloon, cape or deep raglan cut sleeves, and airy materials like organdy, crepe de chine, tulle and chiffon.

"Hats also were similar. One popular type was the large picture hat in black or colored straws matching the dress. Others were small—sailors tipped forward, or pudding-basins of material or straw.

"Navy or black with white accent were also basic for spring and summer."

So far as American tastes are concerned the Dior-sponsored silhouette seems to be the favorite. According to an Associated Press dispatch from Paris:

"American buyers attending the spring fashion shows here are selecting coats and suits of strictly 1950 vintage and not the throwbacks to the mid-1920 styles, one of them said today.

"'We like the sort of suit with short skirt, tight waist and peplum stiffened to stand out in front, being shown by Christian Dior and Jacques Fath,' he said."

Guide to Glamour

Worry Will Menace Your Beauty

By Terry Hunt

Here is advice on glamour from an expert—Terry Hunt, a conditioner of Hollywood stars. Among his clients are Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford and Shirlty Temple. Betty Grable says: "Terry Hunt has helped more stars keep their names on theater marquees than most directors." This is the third of six articles.

CHAPTER THREE—THINK YOUR WAY TO BEAUTY

BEAUTY is as much a matter of inner spiritual radiance as it is of outward physical perfection.

All you need do is to look at the faces of a priest and a low criminal to see how one's mental thinking affects his looks. In the priest, the thoughts are directed upward. In the criminal, every vicious, cutthroat tendency is revealed in his hard, merciless eyes, his tight, thin mouth, and his sneer.

We could make this analogy in women also, taking a nun or a nurse, on the one hand, with her shining ideals and high spiritual aspirations. Contrast her with the hardened streetwalker, from whom all illusions are gone.

The faces of both women will show their emotional and mental backgrounds, the spirit which feeds their soul.

That is why there is more to physical beauty than appears on the surface.

Worry Can Easily Change Your Face

ONE of the greatest menaces to beauty is worry. Worry creates agitated lines in a face which should be smooth and flawless. Worry affects our adrenal glands, giving us high or low blood pressure, disfigures the skin.

Worry upsets our digestion. This leads to pimples, boils, rashes, and other facial disorders. Worry endows us with a hang-dog expression ruinous to beauty.

It is hard to say "Don't worry" in a world which is so upset, where irksome problems beset us. Yet it is also true that we either control our worries or let them run us ragged.

A good philosophy to adopt is the determination that every day of your life you will do your best for your social, business, mental, physical, and spiritual advancement. Beyond that, you will not worry.

That is easier said than done. There are periods in our lives when worries force themselves upon us, whether we will have them or not.

At such times, try to reason them out sensibly, come to a decision that will eliminate the trouble.

If you are still in the grip of your worry, however, refrain from eating. Food taken at such a time is not properly digested and can result in imperfections of skin, and other eruptions.

You Must Learn To Relax Often

YOU MUST learn to relax in the hours when your up-to-the minute attention is not required. Make this an absolute "must" in your beauty book, and you will preserve your charming appearance many years beyond the expected span.

LORETTA YOUNG
. . . beauty is inner radiance

Your face will be kept free of lines and wrinkles, and you will acquire and keep a better poise than you have heretofore known.

Make it a habit if you're working in an office to go into the rest room once or twice during the day and stretch out on the couch, lying completely motionless and relaxed for ten minutes.

Don't try to think of anything. Put your work completely out of your mind. Just relax.

Inhale through your nose, and exhale through your mouth. Stretch languorously for a brief moment and then go back to your desk. You'll be amazed how much better you feel, how much more efficiently you will perform your routine duties.

Your Temper Can Change Your Looks

If you want to be beautiful, control your temper.

Anger, spitefulness, nervous outbreaks are bad for your looks. They lend a mean expression to the face.

Above all, don't eat when you are in a temper. You won't digest what you eat, you'll have indigestion or other stomach troubles.

Ill temper is a developed characteristic; so is grouchiness, moroseness, or any expression of harsh and violent emotions.

These do worse things to our appearance than they do to others. They add lines to our face and an expression of discontent which is ruinous to beauty.

They also repel our friends, and perhaps the particular man who might become "the only one" under happier circumstances.

Common sense is a necessary asset for a woman, particularly in relation to her physical makeup.

So many girls say, "What's the use of my getting into trim—how can I get around this nose?"

Or, "Nothing will take these lines out of my forehead, and with them I haven't a chance to be beautiful."

Magnifying physical defects is a grave mistake. Attractive women are often not beautiful women—they are made glamorous by highlighting their best features, by vivacity, good temper, and personal charm.

You, Too, Can Be Attractive

One or even more bad features will not eliminate you from the running. You must accentuate your good points, bring out the best in you. After that, don't worry—the rest will take care of itself.

Not every woman can be transformed into a beautiful woman, but every woman can be made into an attractive one.

Just how that can be accomplished will be found in these pages. But you must never forget that to be truly attractive and beautiful, you must think right, live right, be right inside your own mind and soul.

Man Arraigned on False Pose, Bad Check Charges Here

A former convict, who allegedly impersonated a retired Navy captain in a deal for a $25,000 Alexandria home, was arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence.

FBI agents who arrested him in Washington Sunday night said as part of his impersonation, he cashed two worthless checks totaling $500 and tendered another bad check for $2000 in the house deal.

They identified him as Leon J. Sparks, 35, of Gloucester City, N. J., and said his criminal record shows arrests every year since 1935 on a variety of charges.

Sparks, according to the FBI, negotiated with Mrs. Helen Marshall Burke Friday in her Alexandria real estate office for a home at 628 S. Lee st., Alexandria. Mrs. Burke is the wife of Taylor Burke, president of the Burke & Herbert Bank & Trust Co., of Alexandria.

Gets $100 Check Cashed

Agents said Sparks tendered the $2000 check on a bank at Collingwod, N. J. While papers were being prepared, the agents said, Sparks talked to Henry Whorton, Mrs. Burke's son-in-law, in the real estate office, and persuaded him to cash a $100 check, without Mrs. Burke's knowledge.

Saturday, the agents said, Sparks visited Henry Koplin, of the Builders & Realty Corp., at 814 St. Asaph st., who built the home Sparks was "buying."

He conferred with Koplin about remodeling the home to accommodate a doctor's offices, still insisting he was a retired Navy captain and a doctor. Then, he persuaded Koplin to cash a $400 check, the agents said, and borrowed Koplin's 1949 Lincoln automobile.

Calls Bank, Then FBI

Meanwhile, Mrs. Burke became suspicious and telephoned Collingwood, learning there was no such checking account. She called the FBI.

Agents arrested Sparks Sunday night as he returned Koplin's auto to the latter's home at 2315 15th st. nw., here. With him was a woman, who was questioned and released.

When Sparks was arranged before Commissioner Lawrence, she asked to talk to Lawrence, and then fainted. After being revived, she identified herself as Mrs. Natalie L. Fetter, 38, of Camden, N. J., a friend of Sparks, who told Commissioner Lawrence he iftends to marry her.

Mrs. Fetter

Lawrence set bond at $5000 and continued the case to February 15. Mrs. Fetter said she was aware Sparks had served time in a previous fraud case, but was unaware of his operations here. She said that "I love him and I'm going to stick by him in spite of his weakness."

Bond Issue Debate Scheduled Thursday

The Madrillon Citizens' Association will debate the proposed school bond issue for Fairfax County in the Dunn Loring Fire House Thursday, starting at 8 p. m.

Bladensburg Policeman Gets Job Back

Suspended for the second time in four months, Bladenburg's Police Pvt. Clifton L. Bartley was again restored to duty by the Town Council last night.

Bartley, 29, had been accused of failing to report for duty, January 30, at Edmonston and Annapolis rds., a school crossing in Bladensburg.

Bartley had a pat answer to Police Chief Henry J. Nebel's charge. He admitted it.

Tells of Party

A victim of the "night before," the policeman said there'd been a party at his house until 5:45 a. m. He was due to report at 8 a. m. But after the party broke up, he confessed, a party-goer was arrested. By the time that was straightened out it was 6:30 a. m. Bartley set the alarm for 7:30 a. m.

"But it didn't wake me up," he affirmed, "and nobody could."

As for the chief's charge that Bartley failed to mention his "criminal record" when he applied for the Bladensburg job, Bartley said the chief had helped him fill out the application.

Document Shows Arrest

Nebel had a document from Washington showing that Bartley had been arrested there for traffic violations, drunkenness, and disorderly conduct. There was also a letter from Staunton, Va., where Bartley had once plied his trade as a policeman and been fired, concerning charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and assault.

The Town Council admitted, at Bartley's prodding, that it had discussed the policeman's difficulties in Staunton before it had hired him.

Bartley had been suspended in October when he was found unconscious near a Bladensburg building where he served as part-time nightwatchman. His revolver, one bullet discharged was found nearby.

Town Council forgave Bartley for that in an executive session a few days later.

Legion Safety Signs Okayed At Hyattsville

The Hyattsville City Council last night gave permission to the Snyder-Farmer-Butler American Legion Post to set up traffic safety signs.

The signs, some of which will read "Children At Play, Drive Slowly," will be erected throughout the city at sites recommended by the city engineer.

The council also awarded a contract to Kermit A. Hunt, contractor, for construction of a sidewalk on 31st pl. between 31st ave. and Lancer dr. and received a petition for a sidewalk from residents of the north side of Jamestown rd. between 31st ave. and Lansing dr.

Appointment of Elmus Husk as a permanent policeman was approved by the council.

Man Who Rented Another's Wife Asks Court Ruling

Naples, Italy, Feb. 6 (AP).—Naples magistrates were asked today to decide whether Vincenzo Marvasi was underpaid when he rented his wife, Clara, to Rino Vinciguerra at $20 a month.

In January, Marvasi, 35, rented Clara, 25, to Vinciguerra, 32, for three months for 40,000 lire ($60).

A formal contract, duly executed on stamped legal paper, said:

"I, the undersigned Vincenzo Marvasi, declare that I cede for the sum of 40,000 lire my wife, Clara, to Rino Vinciguerra. It remains understood, of course, that such cession means that I shall not control the moral and material conduct of my wife only as regards her relations with the aforementioned Mr. Vinciguerra."

Clara and Vinciguerra took an apartment by the sea in the Naples suburbs. Marvasi decided that he did not get full value for his wife and asked for more money. Vinciguerra complained to the courts, asking enforcement of the contract.

REGULARLY SCHEDULED RAISES MAKE GOOD TELEPHONE WAGES BETTER

Here in Washington, 50% of Telephone Employees Will Get Increases This Year

BY ANY sound and fair test, the wages paid telephone people have more than kept pace with those paid in other industries for work requiring comparable knowledge, skill and capacity.

But that isn't the full story. For unlike workers in many other industries, most telephone people receive in addition, scheduled wage increases—generally at 3, 6 or 12-month intervals—until they reach the top pay for their particular job. Known as progression raises, these increases are a part of existing contracts. Employees don't have to ask for them—or strike to get them.

This is one of the many facts about telephone wages that national union leaders, in running down the telephone job, have chosen to ignore. Yet these progression raises alone boosted the Washington telephone payroll by more than $500,000 last year.

Wages Up 97%; Cost of Living Up Only 67%

Besides regular progression increases, telephone employees in Washington have received 7 general wage increases in the past 10 years—amounting, at present to $10,900,000 a year—or nearly five times the increase in telephone rates during the same period.

While the cost of living has gone up here only 67% since before the war, telephone wages have gone up 97%.

Here Are the Average Earnings of Telephone People in Washington

FULLY EXPERIENCED CABLE SPLICERS AND CENTRAL OFFICE REPAIRMEN	$94.96 A WEEK	$4,957.00 A YEAR
(Employees in these crafts with one year's service average $49.37 a week or $2,577.00 a year; with five year's service, $74.48 a week or $3,888.00 a year.)
FULLY EXPERIENCED SWITCHBOARD OPERATING EMPLOYEES	$59.23 A WEEK	$3,092.00 A YEAR
(Operators with one year's service average $44.44 a week or $2,320.00 a year; with five years' service, $53.01 a week or $2,767.00 a year.)
FULLY EXPERIENCED BUSINESS OFFICE WOMEN (SERVICE REPRESENTATIVES)	$62.00 A WEEK	$3,236.00 A YEAR
(Service Representatives with one year's service average $47.59 a week or $2,484 a year; with five years' service $54.21 a week or $2,830.00 a year.)

'Berlin Command'

Howley Greets First Russian With Hook to Whiskers

By Brig. Gen. Frank Howley

This is the third of 12 articles taken from the new book, "Berlin Command," which will be run daily in The Washington Post. The author, Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, battled the Russians for four years, from 1945 to 1949, as deputy commander and then commander of American forces in Berlin.

MY INTRODUCTION to the Russians came on a gray April afternoon in 1945.

I'd had very little contact with them previously. To me, the defenders of Stalingrad were a brave people, stanch allies who were doing a great job in the war.

I was looking forward to meeting and working with the Russians, and was prepared to cooperate to the fullest extent.

At that time, I was commander of the American Military Government detachment scheduled to begin joint occupation of Berlin with the Russians.

My orders were of a very sketchy nature, but I assumed that the American Ninth Army would continue its smashing advance and capture the German capital. I proposed, if humanly possible, to be with our Army when it marched in.

I was on my way to Ninth Army Headquarters at Guetersloh, north of the Ruhr pocket fight, when my command car slowed down to cross a pontoon bridge spanning a small, turgid stream.

The shooting was some distance away and I suppose I must have been daydreaming when I looked up to see a husky man rush toward the car. Running at full speed, he leaped onto the running board and vaulted almost into my lap.

More in suprise than in anger, I swung a left hook to his jaw and knocked him back into the road. His uniform was strange and I assumed he was a German.

I couldn't have been more surprised when he jumped to his feet and shouted, "Russky! Russky!"

Col. R. N. D. Nunn, my British deputy, who was riding with me, also was speechless.

Then, with an air of amused chagrin, he blurted out, "My God, Colonel, you've just bashed the first Russian we've met!"

And so I had. One of many Soviet soldiers captured by the Germans, the man apparently was escaping in the confusion of the final days of the war and was at liberty, seeking his unit somewhere in the distant east.

We dusted him off, gave him the customary cigarettes, and put him back aboard.

He asked our ranks and we both said, "Colonel." He was not impressed, though the Russians are tremendously rank conscious.

Several kilometers later he dropped off the car and, without so much as "Thanks," disappeared into a small German town, perhaps forever.

Curtain Lowered

AFTER the surrender, General Eisenhower and members of his staff flew into Berlin to discuss with Marshal Zhukov, the Russian commander, the future of beaten Germany.

They were among the first Americans to enter the city, but as yet no one had driven across the Russian zone. The Iron Curtain already had been lowered.

Eisenhower was still supreme Allied commander when he met the Russians in Berlin but later, when SHAEF was dissolved, he became American military governor of Germany. His deputy was General Clay, who succeeded Eisenhower as military governor when he returned to the United States to become Chief of Staff.

On July 1, 1945, the road to Berlin was the high road to Bedlam. It was jam-packed with tanks, trucks and other vehicles, military government people and troops, all hurrying toward the city.

Russian officers, in captured ramshackle cars and trucks, raced up and down our columns to see that we weren't escaping with plunder.

They couldn't get it through their thick heads that anyone would evacuate provinces as rich as Saxony and Thuringia without looting them first.

Other Russians attempted to control the movement of our columns for the simple pleasure of indulging themselves.

The road to Berlin was paved with Russian drunks. Some wanted only to exchange toasts in vodka; others behaved like little commissars.

One unit was stopped by a welcoming committee, including colonels, who had been there all day and got thoroughly drunk waiting for us.

When one particularly obstreperous Red Army officer tried, for no apparent reason, to halt a column at a bridge, an American general, whose name I have forgotten but whose deed I will cherish always, jumped from his car and personally deposited the struggling Russian in the ditch to allow our column to pass.

Utter Confusion

A DISAGREEABLE summer rain was pelting down when we finally straggled into Berlin late in afternoon. The Russians had not allowed us to look over our sector before coming in, although that had been the agreement, and none of us knew exactly where to go once we arrived.

Hundreds of officers and men milled around, looking for places to stay in the ruins, and most of them in Class A uniforms, wound up sleeping on the muddy ground in the rain.

My military government detachment, always realistic and ready for emergencies, entered Berlin better prepared than the others. We came in with field equipment—steel helmets and packs on our backs, as we had done through France—because that's your bed and that's your tent, and moved into Grunewald, a forestlike park.

Under the dripping trees, I pulled up my vehicles in a protective circle, as in the old covered-wagon days on the prairie, and posted guards. Not a Russian, not a German could have interfered with us. By 10 o'clock, we had eaten a hot meal and were set for the night.

The morning after our arrival in Berlin, bursting with high resolve, I accompanied General Parks to see Colonel General Gorbatov, the local Russian commander, to discuss our sector. Parks was there as commander of American troops and I as his G-5, commanding the Military Government detachment. Later, I was his deputy.

Gorbatov was a beefy, red-faced combat general with three stars, who had filled his new job only a few weeks. The former Russian commander of Berlin, whom Gorbatov succeeded, was the general whose troops actually captured the city, but he liquidated himself one night by riding his motorcycle into the rear end of a Russian truck.

For the first time, we learned from Gorbatov the extent of the American sector. I had understood that we were getting only five boroughs, out of Berlin's 20.

Six for U. S.

GORBATOV produced a map that showed the United States got six boroughs, not five, the British six, and the Russians eight. Since Parks and I were not disposed to argue, we took six.

We thought at the time we were profiting by a Russian mistake, but we were laboring under a delusion. We didn't get away with anything at all; the agreement had been for six boroughs all along, only higher headquarters had not bothered to tell us.

The boundary question settled, Gorbatov asked when we would be ready to take over our sector.

Parks turned to me and asked, "What do you think, Frank?"

"Right now," I said.

Parks thought a little and said, "Well, the Fourth of July would be a good time, and we ought to have a little ceremony." Our national holiday was two days away.

Gorbatov nodded. "Agreed," he said simply.

Tomorrow: Where and how the American Command made its first mistake.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Raised Eyebrow Dept., (King-Sized)

Wonder what would happen if somebody tried to sell John L. Lewis a ticket to that $100-a-plate Jackson Day Dinner to raise money for Mr. Truman's Democrats?

REASSURING NOTE

Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se. says "you needn't worry so much about the H- and A-bombs. Insurance companies have been selling H & A policies for years."

I had to call my insurance man to get the joke explained. He says that's the trade term for "health and accident" insurance.

ROSY FUTURE

Melvin Altshuler's story that men will be wearing more colorful clothes this Spring leads Jean Broulik of 3850 39th st. nw. to comment:

"The time has come, Oh Men, to shun . . . The monotone, the quiet . . . The drab must go; from head to toe . . . In color you will riot . . . Dark brown and blue you'll soon eschew . . . No colors could be deader . . . This spring we'll view a pastel you . . . But faces will be redder."

CAR CARDS

The Chicago Transit Authority has asked the City Council to permit advertising posters on the exteriors of Windy City streetcars and buses.

Estimated revenue from such posters is $400,000 a year—a sum which would help our own Capital Transit show a profit without raising fares.

So I inquired about Capital Transit's policy regarding such outside posters, and got this reply:

Currently, the company tries to limit itself to one poster (front end) to each streetcar. For aesthetic reasons, the newer cars do not provide facilities for more than one poster.

About 50 percent of the advertisements are sold; the remainder are given, free, to organizations with community-wide interest (such as the Red Cross and Community Chest) or are used in its own behalf by the transit company.

A spokesman for Capital Transit says there is a ready sale for these outside advertisements, and they are considered a good source of non-operating revenue.

However, he points out that Chicago probably has four times as many transit vehicles as Washington, so maximum revenue here would be much less than Chicago's estimated $400,000. Besides, that figure probably represents income from four posters per vehicle—front, back, and both sides.

"Before we'd go to the expense of providing these additional installations," says the spokesman, "we'd have to sell out our present availabilities in front.

"And we'd hate to do that, because it would mean we would no longer be able to give our facilities without charge to community projects which deserve everybody's support."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Five cute 6-week-old puppies; four males, one female." (Otis 7216.)

"Small, short-haired 8-week-old pup; white with black markings." (Falls Church 6866.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Aaron Freeman, 13 W. Chapman st., Alexandria, Va.: I think the milk bottles of bygone years had wider mouths, big enough to accommodate silver dollars. But it makes no difference in this case—by the time I got the cartwheel from Fredericksburg, the Capitol's stand had been dismantled, so I put the dollar in the Palace's "Wishing Well" bucket, which is wide enough for anything you can carry in your pocket.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Boy: Nature's answer to the scientist's contention that there's no such thing as perpetual motion.

OVERHEARD

In the Press Club bar: "I've got half a notion to resign from this club. I don't think I care to be associated with an outfit that would accept a member like me."

MARCH OF PROGRESS

Rocket bombs and guided missles
Got the world into a mess;

If they have your street address.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Polite to Missouri Foes

By Drew Pearson

Harry Truman has frequently said that the two men he would most like to see retired from Congress are the Republican Senators from his home State — Forrest Donnell and James P. Kem of Missouri.

Mrs. Clark

However, the President leaned over backward to be polite to these bitter foes when he and Mrs. Truman lunched wth the Missouri congressional delegation. In fact, politics played a minor role at the luncheon, giving way to a discussion of dogs, led by charming Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of the judge and former Senator from Missouri.

There was a time when a legendary dog played a famous role in the life of Mrs. Clark's late father-in-law, Speaker Champ Clark, whose theme song when he ran for President was "I don't care if he is a houn', you've gotta quit kicking my dog aroun'."

But Mrs. Clark, a former English actress, probably did not remember that famous convention battle of 1912 in which Woodrow Wilson finally beat out Champ Clark. For she dominated the conversation with a eulogy, not of her hound, but of her smooth-haired fox terrier which, she boasted modestly, outshone everything in Washington canine circles and was practically out of this world in pedigrees.

This went on for some time, with Mrs. Truman saying nothing. When Mrs. Clark finally ran out of adjectives about her pooch, the First Lady broke in gently:

"How wonderful," enthused the judge's wife. "What kind?"

"Oh, just a plain dog," replied Mrs. T.

Tide of Toys

Every Christmas I hear some folks arguing that Christmas has become too commercialized, that we give presents chiefly to those who we think are going to give us something in return, that we should not merely practice Christ's teachings on His birthday, but every day.

Christmas has been over more than a month now, and at Philadelphia today an event will take place showing that several million people have been following the above advice and are trying to make Christmas come not once a year but in January, February and March, too.

For today the U. S. Lines' steamer American Defender embarks for Rotterdam carrying the first installment of one of the most precious cargoes ever collected in the U. S. A.—the Tide of Toys. These friendship toys are being donated through the tireless efforts of the American Legion to the children of Europe.

Wars, the American Legionnaires know all too well, come in cycles of about every 20 years. And the children of today can be our friends or the soldiers of tomorrow. That's why the friendship gesture of toys, the first installment of which sails from Philadelphia today, can be so important.

"Training" Plane

Caught in a cobweb of red tape is a surplus B-17 that three organizations claim, that wasn't supposed to fly, and that somehow disappeared from the Wadesboro, N. C., airport. The incident illustrates the manner in which the Army sells surplus planes for $350 if used for educational purposes. Then sometimes they are resold to foreign powers for as much as $25,000.

Here are the facts in the case: After retirement from active duty, the controversial B-17 was sold to the Charlotte, N. C., Civil Air Patrol for a token $350. In order to qualify, the CAP was supposed to be an "educational institution." It also agreed that the B-17 "will not be used for any actual flight purposes," and "will be sold only as scrap and then only after it shall have been rendered completely unfit and useless."

The Babb Company seems to have bought the plane from a CAP official, R. A. Lyon, who hadn't read the fine print in the contract. The CAP doesn't recognize the deal, however, because Lyon is no longer a member. Even Lyon is sorry about it and tried to return the money, but the Babb Company wouldn't take it back.

The Babb Company admits it has purchased three B-17s from "educational institutions," sold one of them to Dictator Trujillo of the Dominican Republic. The other two will probably be sold to France and Denmark. Furthermore the Babb Company has done a big business in single-engine Air Force "training" planes, selling 200 to the Chinese Nationalists, 75 to the Swedes, 75 to the Dutch, 40 to the Swiss, 20 to the Jews and an assortment to other countries.
